Employee-Farmer Puts Special Emphasis On Conserving Soil, Wildlife

There are a total of 131 acres in wildlife upland habitat management, wildlife refuge tree plots (consisting of Norway Spruce, juniper, and barberry), managed meadows, brush management, fencing (the farm is completely bordered), stream crossing, heavy use area protection, hedgerow planting, and prescribed burnings on the conservation farm. Here, John Hicks checks out the switchgrass plots used in the dog draining.

NEWTOWN SQUARE (Delaware Co.) — Years ago, Chester County conservation farmer John Hicks saw what he believes were the "damaging effects of large farming" to the soil on his dairy in West Chester.

On his own farm and on subsequent farms that he has since managed, Hicks worked hard to prevent water and soil from leaving his farm.

Along the way, he picked up many clues about how important it is not only to preserve the soil but to preserve nature's habitat on the land. And in the two decades since he left dairying, he has been able to mesh the best of both worlds — farming for a living and farming to preserve the environment.

For his efforts as manager of the Double-D Farm owned by Gwynne McDevitt just inside the Chester County border, Hicks was honored with the 1996 Conservation Innovation Award by the Chester County Conservation District, presented to the farm in January at the county crops day.

Hicks manages a farm that is comprised of a little more than 150 acres on which Gordon Highland Setters are trained. The farm is used to train the field trial dogs and prepare them for nationwide contests, of which McDevitt has won several.

Bill Wolter, a conservationist and farmer from Greenwood, Del., is instrumental with McDevitt in the training of the dogs. Wolter also brought the VA-70 Lespedeza to be used as border.

At the McDevitt Farm, Hicks has installed a wide variety of best management practices with the training of the dogs (14 in all) in mind — as well as the preservation of the environment.

"I was a dairy farmer before this — an intense dairy farmer at that," Hicks told Lancaster Farming at the McDevitt Farm last week. Hicks operated a 600-acre dairy farm with his father and uncle in West Chester for a number of years and took over the farm when he was graduated from Wilmington College in Wilmington, Ohio with an ag degree in 1964.

Maryland Holstein Association Celebrates 33rd Convention

STEVENSVILLE, Md. — The 33rd annual convention of the Maryland Holstein Association brought together over 400 Holstein breeders and enthusiasts from across the state.

"The Eastern Shore, where the sun rises first in Maryland," was the theme for the convention, sponsored by the Queen Anne's Holstein and the Kent Dairy clubs.

The two-day convention was held March 14-15 at the American Legion in Stevensville and the sale held at the Queen Anne's County 4-H Park.

A welcome to the Eastern Shore was extended to all by Donny Skinner.

Jason Myers, president of the Maryland Holstein Association, called the meeting to order. He encouraged everyone to keep a positive attitude. He said, "It's not what we get out of it — it's what we get out of it by giving."

Jason thanked the five retiring directors, Ken Holland, Delvin Mast, Tom Remsberg, Steve Wilson, and Kevin Leaverton, for their service to the association.

Committees, finance and membership activities were discussed. The summer picnic is to be held the third Sunday in June at Savage-Leigh Farm.

National Holstein Association representatives Clarence Stauffer and Tom Dum gave a program on the herd book proposal for a comprehensive, fully disclosed ID program.

This generated a lively discussion from the audience. Opinions of association members should be given to the state delegates going to the National Holstein Convention in Grand Rapids, Mich., in June.

Ed Fry Jr. gave a report on a proposed dairy price support bill. He encouraged everyone to call their federal representative and ask them to support the bill.

The current officers — Jason Myers, president; Carl Bender, vice president; and Anita Hill,

Longacre's Modern Dairy Refits For Organic Processing

BARTO (Berks Co.) — The "organic" milk market is beginning to grow in southeastern Pennsylvania and its development offers a glimpse into entreprenuerial accomplishment.

In terms of success, it is an apparent winner because it has found its way into the retail market place, it is providing a working cash flow, not running up debt, and it seems to have more potential for growth than not.

And perhaps most importantly, those involved in the business say they believe in its merits.

This series of articles looks at that organic offspring of the mainstream dairy industry and began last week with Ned and Susan MacArthur of West Grove, in Chester County, who along with Ned's father Norman, and business partner Gary Comstock created Natural Dairy Products Corp.

Natural Dairy Products Corp. was formed as a management company that is currently involved with eight producers who are certified organic dairy producers under the Organic Crop Improvement Association certification rules.

A local chapter of OCIA was formed to oversee the certification process. The local board of review consists of dairy producers, a dairy processor, and a retailer of organic dairy product. Determination of an applicant for designation as an organic farm depends upon approval from the board. The board also sets conditions for con-

Poultry Progress Day Highlights Research

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Making a comfortable living for poultry farmers is stifled by flies, bird diseases, zoning interferences, and bouncing prices. But the annual Poultry Progress Day held on Thursday addressed all these problems and offered bright expectations for producers and industry marketing poultry products.

The all-day seminar held at the Farm and Home Center demonstrated the year-round research that Penn State scientists and extension personnel conduct for the poultry industry's benefit.

Dr. William Weaver gave an overall review of the recently completed research facilities at Penn State's main campus. The six buildings housing incubators, environmental chambers, floor pens, batteries, and cages, and a processing facility were designed to enable research and collect data from the studies.

Weaver profiled five research programs.

"We are attempting to build a better bird with lean muscle and less fat," he said. This is being done through research on piquing the chicken growth hormone so that birds will produce it naturally in larger amounts rather than being added to feed, by injection or by other means.

Ordinarily broilers that undergo a 12-hour period of feed withdrawal will lose 12 percent of body

NY Phil Frozen Eggs

MARCH 14, 1997

Prices were unchanged to lower for whole and yolks, and the balance of prices were unchanged. The market tone was about steady to instances weak. Demand remained light for trucklot volumes, and inquiry for small volumes was light to moderate. Floor stocks were adequate. Breaking stock supplies were also usually adequate to instances tight where plants competed with grading plants who prepared for the upcoming Easter retail needs. Liquid and frozen eggs (ingredients included) processed under federal inspection in the East for the week ending March 8, 1997 were 1% more than last week, and 9% more than last year.

Delmarva Broiler

MARCH 19, 1997

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds continued at its seasonally slow pace. Seller offerings were adequate to ample, and were more readily available on the over 3 pound sizes. Live supplies were generally moderate; weights varied, and were mostly desirable to heavy. Processing schedules were moderately heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 52 to 66 cents. Trade sentiment was at best steady and cautious. In the parts complex, all items were fully sufficient to handle the limited buying interest.

National Grain Market

ST. JOSEPH, MO
MARCH 19, 1997

Grain and soybean bids moved sharply higher at the close. Good export sales overnight for wheat and corn, reports Taiwan bought South American beans, and China is seeking a large amount of Argentine soymeal, were supportive to bids. Wheat 1 to 10 cents higher. Corn 1 to 5 cents higher. Sorghum 4 cents higher. Soybeans 4 to 13 cents higher. Overnight US corn purchase by Japan, strengthened corn bids after yesterday's sharp declines. Heavy rains and flooding in the Eastern Corn Belt is delaying some of the early planting. Soybean bids continued sharply higher as meal and oil demand improve. Reports that South American and Argentine soybean and meal are being purchased, added support. The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

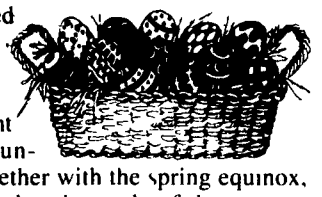
EASTER, MARCH 30.

THE ETERNAL EASTER EGG

In Italy, it's said you spend your Christmas with your family, but you spend Easter with whom you want. A celebration of love as much as of the Resurrection, the Italian Easter is also an occasion to bestow valuable trinkets — from expensive jewelry to promises of vacation getaways — in the confines of a chocolate egg. How the egg evolved to this form from its humble hard-boiled state is uncertain But always the egg has meant good luck, fertility, abundance, and new life Together with the spring equinox, the Easter egg promises that the cycle of the seasons is eternal.



Eggs and oaths are easily broken.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Salt the water for boiling eggs; cracked eggs won't leak and the eggshells will slip off more easily.

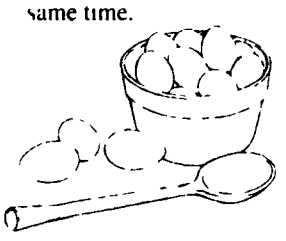
BAKED EGGS

Per serving:
1 tablespoon chopped fresh dill
1 tablespoon cubed cheddar
1 tablespoon diced ham
2 eggs
1 tablespoon sour cream
salt and pepper

Preheat oven to 400° F and lightly grease one 3-inch ramekin per serving. Add dill, cheese, and ham to ramekin, then break eggs over that Add a dollop of sour cream, and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Place ramekin(s) in a baking pan, add water to the pan to cover half way up the side of the ramekin(s), and bake about 15 minutes Serve immediately. The ingredients listed fill one ramekin for a single serving, but you can bake multiple ramekins at the same time.



The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

A clear St. Mary's Day (March 25), a fruitful year ahead.

A pleasant Easter Sunday means a bountiful harvest.

When the Sun sets bright and clear, an easterly wind you need not fear.

When the Sun goes pale to bed, 'twill rain tomorrow, it is said.

OPINION

Stewards Of Life

Year-in, year-out, farmers are constantly reminded that they are stewards of the land.

Sometimes it's difficult to listen to that statement.

Sometimes it's irritating, especially when it's being shouted, or used tauntingly, or sarcastically, by those whose goal is to force their agenda upon farmers.

There are times when the whole of the world seems to be putting responsibility for the condition of the environment upon the farmer — finger-wagging, and repeating, "You are the stewards of the land!"

Then, along comes spring.

Spring reminds us that it is not just the land to which the living are bound to provide stewardship.

The living are bound to be the stewards of life.

That is the covenant: living beings must make a good environment for living beings yet to come.

And this is true for all, not just the farmers.

Spring also helps renew the basic understanding that life exists at the interface of air, water, soil and sun.

Science has broken each of these "elements" down into subgroups and sub-elements, but in the world in which we live, understanding where life occurs is as simple as knowing that it requires those basic things — all at the same time, and at the same place.

It was made that way. Science attempts to understand it.

Spring is when the grasses, trees and shrubs of the mountains and bottomlands blush in pastels of pink, green and white buds; when the hue and texture of the fields and cover crops change to a darker fuzzier green; when the sheep lamb, and cows freshen; when the aquatic plants in healthy streams begin to regrow and waterfowl and other birds nest.

Most of this can readily be seen on farms.

But look elsewhere. Who are the stewards?

And who is to take responsibility for creating places where life cannot exist or is imperiled — the farmer who can consider himself a "steward of life?"

No, the sterilization of parts of the world doesn't come from those who are stewards of life.

Rather, it comes from those consumed with the desire to be powerful among men; those who want to possess the time, interest and possessions of other men; and those ignorant enough to believe that cooperation and complacency with the greedy will provide fulfillment, happiness or health.

Though not a reason to acquiesce to the desires of greed or sloth, there can be great comfort is knowing that every man-made sterility on Earth can never stand forever, or even long, against the life-making works of God.

There is no time better than spring to use the senses we were given to listen to it, see it, speak it ... and help it along, if we can.

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Prevent Electrical Fires

Recently a high rise cage laying house experienced extensive damage as a result of an electrical fire. Fortunately, only a few laying hens were killed.

The cause of the fire was an arching connection between the back of a circuit breaker and the main buss bar in the electrical panel.

The resulting heat melted through the back of the electrical panel and ignited the frame of the building. The bad connection was a result of condensation inside the panel caused by cold air being drawn into the warm panel through the pipes leading to the attic. The moisture also corroded the breaker so it could not trip.

If you are experiencing sweating inside or around your electrical boxes you may be the next fire. Contact your electrician to remedy the problem either by sealing the pipes leading to unheated areas or by rerouting wires.

Remember, electricity and moisture do not mix. It is just a matter of time until something goes wrong.

To Follow Steps To Higher Crop Yields

According to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension agronomy agent, regardless of what crop you grow, there are several basic practices that, if followed, will increase yields.

First, know your soil type and match crops to the soils.

Drainage, fertility, acidity are only a few of the soil characteristics which must be matched to the crop being grown.

Second, use quality seeds from high performing varieties based on comparison trails.

Third, plant sufficient seeds to have optimum plant population.

Limiting the number of plants will limit yields. However, too many plants will also reduce yields.

Knowing the optimum plant population for the variety you are planting and the soil type you have will help make the decision easier.

Fourth, tend to soil fertility needs. Adequate levels of lime and fertilizer are needed to meet crop needs. Use a soil test to determine these levels.

And fifth, control pests. Weeds, insects and diseases all reduce yields when present in high numbers.

It is important to monitor fields and treat the problem when an economic threshold is met.

To Plan For Forage Quality

Quality forages are important in the ration of high producing cows, according to Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County Extension dairy agent.

Forage quality starts with selecting crops that fit into the feed program. You need to be selecting hybrids and varieties with high nutrient content and that are highly digestible.

Corn silage hybrids should be selected for uniform ear and stalk dry down. This may be less crucial if corn is rolled at harvest time to improve the digestibility of overmature hard kernels.

In choosing hybrids for improved digestibility, farmers may have to make a trade-off between lower yields, reduced standability and lower resistance to diseases and insects with a possible increase in mold invasion.

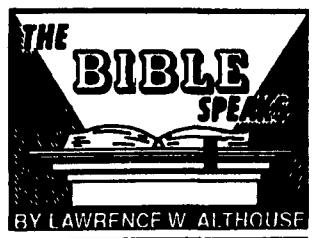
If silage harvest takes place over an extended period of time or if custom harvesting schedules are unpredictable, consider selecting hybrids of varying maturities.

Also, consider varying the planting dates to provide a wider window of time and greater flexibility for harvesting.

Another option is to increase plant population in an effort to improve tonnage and digestibility.

Unfortunately, there is not a lot of research that has been done in these areas. Thus, farmers are advised to discuss these concerns with their seed representatives.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "Every obstacle is a stepping stone to your success."



BUSY BODIES OR BUSYBODIES?
March 23, 1997

Background Scripture:
2 Thessalonians 3
Devotional Reading:
Ephesians 4:25-32

There was a problem in the Church at Thessalonika that is hard for us to understand today.

In his second letter, Paul says, "Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that you keep away from any brother who is living in idleness and not in accord with the tradition that you received from us. For you ourselves know how you ought to imitate us; we were not idle when we were with you, we did not eay any one's bread without paying, that with toil and labor we worked night and day, that we might not burden any of you" (3:6-8).

Actually, this was not a new problem for the Thessalonians; in Paul's first letter (1Thess. 5:14), Paul asked the church to admonish the idlers. Now, in the name of Christ he is commanding them to keep away from these people. One wonders why Paul has changed or added to his original command.

I must confess that I find 1 Thess. 3 confusing and troubling. Paul's advice seems contradictory. On the other hand, they shall shun idlers (3:6, 14), but "Do not look on him as an enemy, but warn him as a brother" (3:15). I would like Paul to explain how one shuns a brother. Admonishment I understand; shunning I do not. Growing up in the Pennsylvania Dutch (German) country of Pennsylvania, I observed "shunning" of "erring" members by some denominations of "plain people." It always seemed an unchristian means to a desired Christian end.

Most of the congregational problems of which I have read in the New Testament, I have also found to have parallels in congregational life today. But not this one: idleness, an unwillingness to work and earn a living.

MERE BUSYBODIES

But, as Paul carries this one step further, I find a problem I have encountered and not infrequently: "For we hear that some of you are living in idleness, mere busybodies, not doing any work" (3:11). Lazy parishioners I have never known; busybodies, yes.

It has been suggested by some scholars that the reason for the idleness of some Thessalonian Christians may have been their expectation that the return of Christ in glory was immanent. Paul's letters to the Thessalonians seem to corroborate this expectation. Assuming that Christ was coming soon, they may have decided there was little point in pursuing their vocations.

BUSY ABOUT WHAT?

Although we will never know why these Thessalonians were idle, we can see very clearly what the effect was: some of them became busybodies. Instead of tending their own business — their own growth in discipleship — they tended the business of everyone else. Is that a serious sin? Paul seemed to think so. It is one thing to be concerned about other people, but something else to insinuate ourselves uninvited into their lives. It is like those whom Jesus admonished: "You hypocrite, first take the log out of your own eye, and then you will see clearly to take the speck out of your brother's eye" (Matt. 7:5).

Actually, these "idle" Thessalonians were not really idle; they were quite busy — attempting to tell others how to lead their lives. If they had used the same amount of energy in helping others instead of judging them — for that is what this is all about: judging Christian brothers and sisters — the work of the gospel would be greatly enhanced.

That has always been my observation, too. If, in the church, we spent our time and efforts in helping others instead of judging them and trying to get them to do what we want, how much better the life of the church would be. This doesn't mean that we should not be concerned about the speck in our neighbor's eye, but that we should first deal with the log in our own.

The Lord needs busy bodies, but not busybodies.

secretary/treasurer — were re-elected to serve another term.

New three-year directors are Ron Kling, Mike Allne, Laura Phipps-Douthit, and Robert Knutsen. Serving a one-year term will be D.D. Hollingsworth.

Lewis Riley, secretary of agriculture, was the speaker. He spoke on different legislative proposals, namely, a dairy bill, a pesticide bill, and a veterinarian bill, as well as providing highlights of happenings in Annapolis (the capital).

He stated that agricultural land preservation is the state's top priority program.

Progressive Breeders Registry Awards were presented to: Marlin Hoff, 16 years; Clovertop Farm, Inc., 13 years; Carl Bender, 12 years; Jason and Donna Myers, 9 years; Donald Wilcom, 9 years; My Ladys Manor Farm, Inc., 8 years; Savage-Leigh Farm, 7 years; Dennis E. There were five Progressive Genetics Herd Award winners honored. This award is given to the herds with the highest average TPI of all the females in the herd.

Receiving awareds were Allen Bros., with 177 head, 6 years; Richard Flickinger, 218 head, 6 years; Marlin Hoff, 897 head, 6 years; Scott Hood, 97 head, 6 years; and Jason and Donna Myers, 144 head, 6 years.

Production and type winners were Futuraland 2020 Holsteins; Savage-Leigh Farm; Hannahs Distillery Springs Farm; O.C. Smith and Family; Kenneth and Shirley Zimmerman; Tom and Joy Crothers; Oren C. Bender; Kingstead Farms.

Awards for high herd for milk-DHI went to Tom and Joy Crothers, 89 cows and under; and Savage-Leigh Farm, in the 90 cows and over catagory.

Dr. Lee Majeski presented a brief program on the many possibilities of using the new Breeders Net.

The featured speaker for the day program was Dr. John Erri. Dr. Erri and his wife have been veterinarians for 27 years. Dr. Erri, from Denmark, operated his own dairy farm from 1977 to 1989. He bred the highest production bull in Denmark.

He began doing embryo work in 1982, and in 1989 his practice went to all ET work. In 1990 he formed a relationship with ABS-Global to put US Genetics in Denmark.

In 1994 he and ABS bought a bull stud in Denmark to market U.S. semen. In 1996 he formed a partnership with Echo Farms in Denmark where he owns half the cows.

There are 400,000 cows in Denmark, 100 percent registered and 80 percent on milk test. They cows are tuberculosis and lukosis-free in Denmark.

Producers have a milk quota and the average farm milks about 60 cows. Goals for the near future include attempting to bring the national average up to 100-200 cows with milking robots, perhaps by the end of 1997.

Erri said Denmark has the same problem as United States producers, as far as milk prices dropping and working with a high labor cost. The average annual labor salary is about $40,000.

They also have other restrictions, such as they can only spread manure from February to spring, and must plow down within 24 hours.

In other convention action, the ladies had a historical theme program with tours of the old Episcopal Church, Beaten Biscuit Store, Old Wye Grist Mill, and Old Wye Oak.

After touring on a rainy day, a lunch and style show were enjoyed at Bloomingdale Place, a 17th century home. After lunch they were free to shop at the outlets and shops in the area.

The convention concluded with a buffet banquet where the highlights were the youth awards. Paul Gunther was toastmaster for the evening. Jana Edwards, Eastern Shore dairy princess gave the invocation and a milk toast was given to Sarah Bedgar, Maryland dairy princess.

Music for the evening was provided by Christy Beauchamp, Worchester County Farm Queen.

A fun auction of donated items was held following the awards. The proceeds of $2,430 are to benefit the Maryland Holstein dairy bowl teams going to Grand Rapids for the national contest in June.

PFB Seeks Continued Over-Order Price

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — In response to the continuing low milk price situation plaguing dairymen, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau will be asking the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) to delay for six months a scheduled decrease in the over-order price.

PMMB increased the over-order price from 50 cents per hundredweight (cwt.) of milk to 80 cents last October after PA Farm Bureau presented evidence showing higher production costs were causing dairymen to lose money. At that time, PMMB had set April 30, 1997 as the date for the over-order price to decrease by 30 cents/cwt. and revert back to its previous level.

"The devastating drop in milk prices this past winter has really put the average dairy farmer back under financial pressure," said Harold Curtis of Warren County, chairman of PA Farm Bureau's Dairy Advisory Committee. "We need to hold off any further price cuts, such as a decrease in the over-order price, for at least six months."

PA Farm Bureau requested in January that PMMB hold a hearing on possible over-order price adjustments. A hearing date has been set for April 9 in Harrisburg. PA Farm Bureau representatives will be on hand to testify on behalf of Pennsylvania dairymen.

"Feed supplement costs continue to be high," said Curtis, "and milk production is suffering. Dairymen need the assurance of some price stability to help weather the current situation."

The PMMB over-order price is paid to Pennsylvania producers of Class I milk processed and sold within state boundaries.

PA Farm Bureau is a statewide, voluntary farm organization which represents 26,625 farm and rural families in 54 county farm bureaus.

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Like a complicated puzzle as seen from the air, cropland on the Oberholtzer Farm moves in mysterious ways — strips that are narrow in fields that are not uniform with rows that end in points, and some rows that simply end for no apparent reason.

But the seven-generation farm, operated by Clair N. and M. Laverne Oberholtzer and family in Mount Joy Township, learned through the years that intensive natural resource management was key to survivability, so that was how the fields were cared for.

For the farm's conservation stewardship, the Oberholtzer family was honored on Thursday night with the Lancaster County Conservation District's 1997 Outstanding Cooperator Award. The family accepted the award at the district's annual banquet, attended by more than 250 at Yoder's Restaurant in New Holland.

According to the district, the farm has many interesting features going all the way back to William Penn. One of these is 50 acres of woodland located in four different areas of the farm, Also, there are 16.5 acres of pasture in three different locations.

According to Gerald Heistand of the conservation district, who narrated a slide presentation, the farm has a "lot of history" and challenged any farmer in the county to work the kind of difficult terrain on the Oberholtzer property and still keep conservation in focus.

According to the district, the catalyst for changes to a more conservationally minded approach to farming began in the 1960s with the help from the Elilzabethtown Vocation Agricultural Department. Instructor Elvin Hess sparked Clair's interest in having the Soil Conservation Service (now called the Natural Resource Conservation Service) come out to the farm. When plans were put into place, a total of 2,300 feet of waterway and 8,263 feet of terraces were installed.

A few years afterward, a decision was made to place in stripcropping as a best management practice.

Clair took over the dairy farm from his father Samuel in 1974, purchasing it in 1981. Farmland erosion on the west side of Oberholtzer Road was not as critical as the rest of the farm, but Clair decided it would benefit from additional conservation practices, so 200 feet of waterways and 3,500 feet of terrace were constructed. At the same time, a spring development was installed in the meadow below the barn.

In 1993 a manure storage system was added to the operation with assistance from the Chesapeake Bay Program. Clair followed the district's philosophy of working with erosion control practices before adding a manure storage structure to the operation. The storage structure allows manure to be applied closer to the time the crops can use the nutrients.

The Oberholtzer farm does not have enough manure to meet the nutrient needs, so starter is used for corn and alfalfa

On both owned and rented acreage, the farm supports 75 cows, 25 heifers, and 25 calves The cropland includes 96 acres of corn, 42 acres of alfalfa, and 27 acres of wheat, with one acre of rye. Proper terraces are key in erosion management Clair uses a rollover plow so the furrow can be thrown one way three of the four years The terraces on the farm are not parallel — there are point rows and the strips are not all uniform. So it takes special management strategies each step of the way to ensure the terraces are tilled correctly.

Also at the banquet, a special award was presented to the Safe Harbor Water Power Corp. for the special use of valuable rock material when they neared completion of the Fish Passage Project. The corporation realized they had a surplus of 9,000 cubic yards of rock. Although it would cost additional money, Safe Harbor wanted to donate the material to help in the Conestoga River stream bank stabilization efforts.

Safe Harbor secured the idea with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the Pa. DEP. In four months, Safe Harbor stabilized approximately 1,200 feet of badly eroding river bank. In addition, the corporation improved the river corridor by installing a series of rock deflectors that serve to enhance the in-stream habitat for fish and other aquatic organisms.

At the banquet the Youth Conservation School Service Award was granted to Daniel Boyer, 17, son of Diane and Raymond Boyer, Mount Joy. Dan, a senior at Donegal High School, attended the Youth Conservation School in 1993. He then returned as counselor from 1994-1996. As a counselor, Dan provided supervision and leadership to a group of 5-6 students. He is a senior at Donegal High School. After graduation, Dan plans to enter the military.

The district provided special thanks to the Northern Lancaster County Game and Fish Protective Association for support of conservation education in Lancaster County. The club owns a 150-acre farm in northern Lancaster County. They have hosted the Youth Conservation School since 1981.

The Oberholtzer family was honored on Thursday night with the Lancaster County Conservation District's 1997 Outstanding Cooperator Award. The family accepted the award at the district's annual banquet, attended by more than 250 at Yoder's Restaurant in New Holland. From left, Clair, Laverne, Jesslyn, and Brent.

The district presented several awards to those whose efforts highlighted conservation work and education in the county. L. Nevin Greiner, who is stepping down as co-director of the Lancaster County Youth Conservation School (which he served since 1989), was honored for his many years of involvement with the school.

Ag Science Prominent At Lancaster Science, Engineering Fair

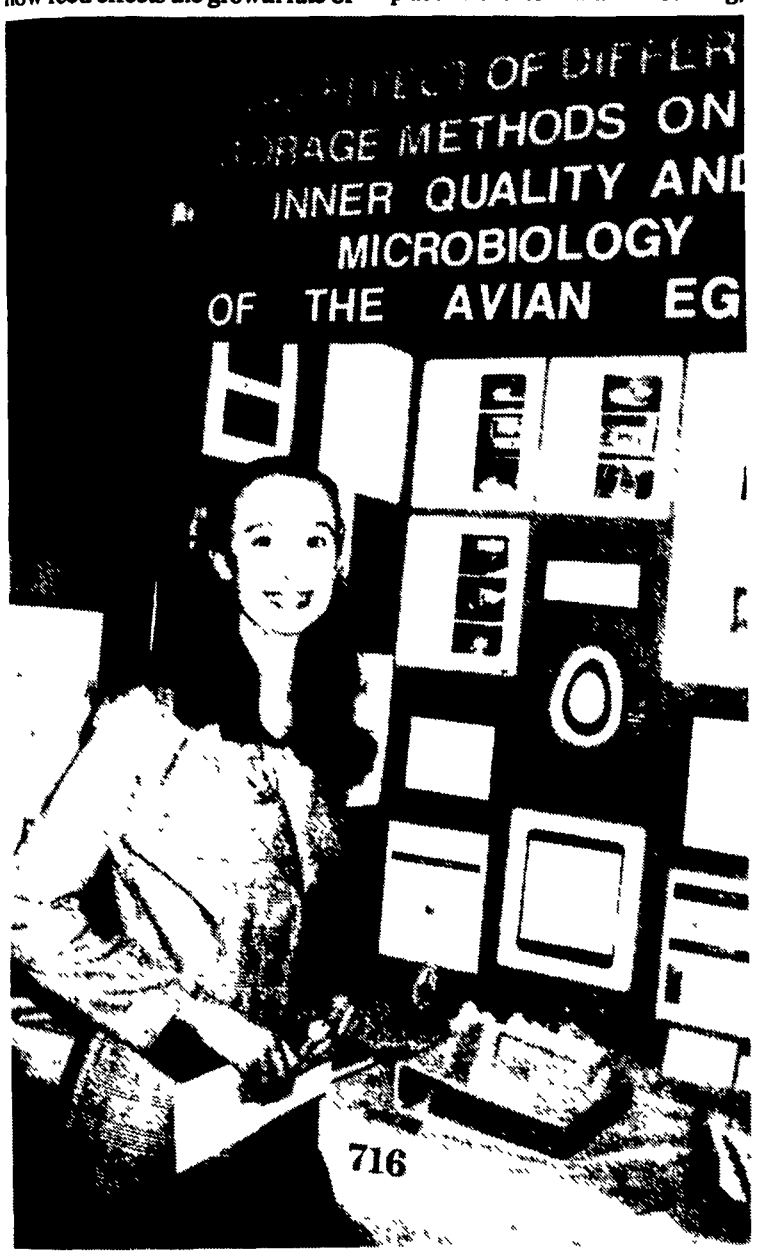
ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Agricultural science was prominent during the awards presentations at last week's Lancaster Science and Engineering Fair in Franklin & Marshall College.

Taking the spotlight was poultry research, followed by a look at how feed effects the growth rate of mice.

Capturing top awards at the annual Lancaster County event, in which students in area junior and senior high schools participate, were several Ephrata High School students: in the biology segment, Kendra Weaver, first place in the senior high school division and Charity Irvine, third place. Second place went to Sarah Woodling, Hempfield High School. In biology, an honorable mention went to Janelle Hoover, Ephrata. And the top physics award went to an Ephrata ag science student, Joanne Zimmerman.

Lancaster Farming spoke this week to the students who capped an entire year of hard work in planning and carrying out the research on an array of poultry and other projects and in presenting those projects to the public.



Sarah Woodling, 15, daughter of Russell and Barbara Woodling, Landisville, is a sophomore at Hempfield High School. Sarah placed second in biology with her exhibit, "The Effect of Different Storage Methods on the Inner Quality and Microbiology of the Avian Egg."

Kendra Weaver

Kendra Weaver, 17, daughter of L. Keith and JoAnne Weaver, Reinholds, won first place in the biology division for her project, "Egg Shell Quality — The Calcium Connection."

Kendra, a junior at Ephrata High School, lives on a 33,000-bird broiler farm under contract with Pennfield.

Kendra said she became interested in a project about egg quality when she learned that the "biggest loss to the layer industry is in cracked egg shells."

Kendra compared the protein and other nutrient feeding management of broilers compared to layers. Using brown lime (calcium carbonate), she looked at the overall egg shell quality as she raised the calcium levels in feed — as compared to a control group on standard feed and one with a lower calcium feed.

What she found was that the group with the higher amounts of calcium feed as a total percentage of the diet had an improved shell thickness by several micrometers. Under four separate tests, there was success.

She attributes her success with her award-winning project to the donation of 12 Dekalb Leghorns by the Ephrata Area Young Farmers Association.

As for the results of the tests, "I was very surprised," she said. She did not expect such clear-cut results in her comparisons — and the results held up over several repetitions.

"That the best part of the experience with the projects," she said, "seeing the kinds of results and how they all work together."

Kendra Weaver, 17, daughter of L. Keith and JoAnne Weaver, Reinholds, won first place in the biology division for her project, "Egg Shell Quality — The Calcium Connection."

She also attributes her success with the help she received from her father in constructing the project display. She used Quatropro software on her computer system to help present the material, making charts from extensive notes on feeding cycles, dates, and times. Kendra said that the project was also her supervised agricultural education (SAE) projects in independent research for Cloister FFA, for which she is president.

For her project, Ernest M. Orr Jr., ag science instructor at Ephrata, served as adviser. Kendra is enrolled in Ag Science III at Ephrata.

Kendra said she is planning to studying agricultural education at Penn State or another college, and travel to other, less developed countries to show children how to farm and show them how to better their lives.

from Sauder's Eggs in Lititz for her project, which examined the question regarding an old saying: could eggs maintain an extremely long shelf life if boiled or microwaved for only 10 seconds? She took the suggestion from her father, told to him in his work with the Boy Scouts, that eggs could last up to three months with only a short boiling time.

Sarah said she used two sets of controls and four sets of variables. She used a system to boil the eggs for 10 seconds, to microwave a separate set of eggs for 10 seconds, to double-polybag another set, and then use paraffin wax to cover another set. Each was examined and compared to control groups, including those refrigerated.

Every week of the test, Sarah would grade, candle to grade air cells, and take the pH of the albumen. She did this for 12 weeks.

What surprised Sarah about the findings was that the old saying may be true. Either boiling or microwaving the eggs extended the life of the eggs 12 weeks. Another surprise is that while eggs in paraffin wax looked promising, after three weeks they deteriorated. The double-polybag method

Cattlemen's Symposium To Examine Preconditioned Calves

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

ADAMSTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Like other commodity producers in the '90s, commercial cow-calf producers have been looking for ways to "add value" to their product.

One way that has been proven to add the extra bang for the buck to calf producers is the value of a preconditioned calf — one that is prevaccinated and preconditioned for the feeder industry.

According to one expert on the preconditioned calf, that value can add up to more money per hundredweight of calves sold — about $1.35 more per hundredweight for calves vaccinated preweaning and sold at weaning.

Dr. Ken Odde, senior veterinarian at Pfizer Animal Health from Pollock, S.D., will offer details about preconditioned cattle at the Eastern Cattlemen's Symposium, scheduled for three different locations next week.

Odde will speak at Weaver's Market in Adamstown on March 25, at the Susquehanna Valley Country Club in Selinsgrove on March 26, and at the Toftrees Resort Hotel in State College on March 27.

Along with other speakers, Odde will present information about the values of vaccination at weaning to reduce risk of respiratory and other diseases to cattle as they enter the marketing channel.

(Odde will offer information on calving management at the Selinsgrove and State College locations only.)

Normally, after leaving the farm, the producer who will finish the calves is responsible for vaccination programs. But many veterinarians are beginning to understand and appreciate the concept of early pretreatment to ensure survivability and marketability.

This is in line with the concept of customer demand.

"You try to do what the customer wants you to do," said Odde. "The customer will define what the quality product is."

This product with "added value" can help producers achieve a better bottom line.

Also at all three locations, Odde will be joined by Dr. Chuck Lambert, chief economist with the National Cattlemen's Beef Association, Washington, D.C.

Cattle markets have recently experienced some tremendous changes, and Lambert will discuss the forces that made this happen as well as how these forces will influence the beef market in the future. He will on the program March 25 and 26. According to Dr. John Comerford, Penn State extension beef specialist, the Eastern Cattlemen's Symposium at State College has been an annual event for a number of years as part of the Pennsylvania Beef Expo program.

On March 27, Dr. Lee Myer will be speaking in State College.

Lee, from the University of Kentucky, will discuss market outlook with the State College audience as well as bring perspective for the cow-calf sector in the future.

Also in State College will be Henry Bergfeld of Summitcrest Angus in Summitville, Ohio. According to Comerford, for the past several years, "Henry has directed a breeding program at Summitcrest with the objective of consumer satisfaction for beef," he noted. "In the age of the 'consumer-driven' beef industry, these efforts will provide a guide to much of the future in breeding beef cattle."

Other topics include using feed resources more effectively, calving management, handling facilities that work, and management of replacement heifers.

Cost is $25 at the door. The fee includes a buffet lunch and a copy of the proceedings for all the sessions.

Three years later, Hicks began working for the previous owner of Double-D (then called Del Chester Farm) owned by Anne Pepper Ashton. Ashton sold the property in 1986 to Gwynne McDevitt.

Hicks, who lives on an eight-acre farmette in West Chester and leases 172 acres of crop farm to Norman Laffey in Cochranville, said that McDevitt has "her heart invested strongly" in all aspects of the farm and the dog training enterprise. As a result, years ago, the farm was converted to small grain and hay cropland to a wildlife farm in order to facilitate training of the dogs.

She also has invested heavily in the soil conservation aspects of the farm, Hicks noted.

Hicks indicated that the half the land is highly erodible, with some land sloping more than 30 percent in some spots.

Conservation practices are vital. The hilly, rocky land presents many challenges to the groundskeepers — they have to maintain switchgrass strips for the many quail and pheasants and food crops to support the extensive wildlife.

There are a total of 131 acres in wildlife upland habitat management, wildlife refuge tree plots (consisting of Norway Spruce, juniper, and barberry), managed meadows, brush management, fencing (the farm is completely bordered), stream crossing, heavy use area protection, hedgerow planting, and prescribed burnings. The Hicks have installed 80 acres of a conservation cropping system, contour strip cropping, and grasses and legumes in rotation, according to the district. There is also a one-acre grassed waterway, 12 acres of no-till switchgrass seedings, one acre of critical area plantings, and 131.9 acres of crop residue use.

Through the years, Hicks has been helped by his son, Jay, a senior in ag and bioengineering at Penn State and a member of the Delta Theta Sigma fraternity.

At the farm late last week, Jay was busy preparing an additional 25 acres of land purchased by McDevitt that will be converted to training ground.

When John Hicks speaks to school children, he emphasizes the importance of water quality. He likes to equate the streams on the farm, he said, with the human body.

The human body is a metaphor for the farm. Hicks uses the analogy of the skin as a covering (the grasses protecting the soil) for the body, which pumps good blood through the veins (the water transportation and purification processes of the land).

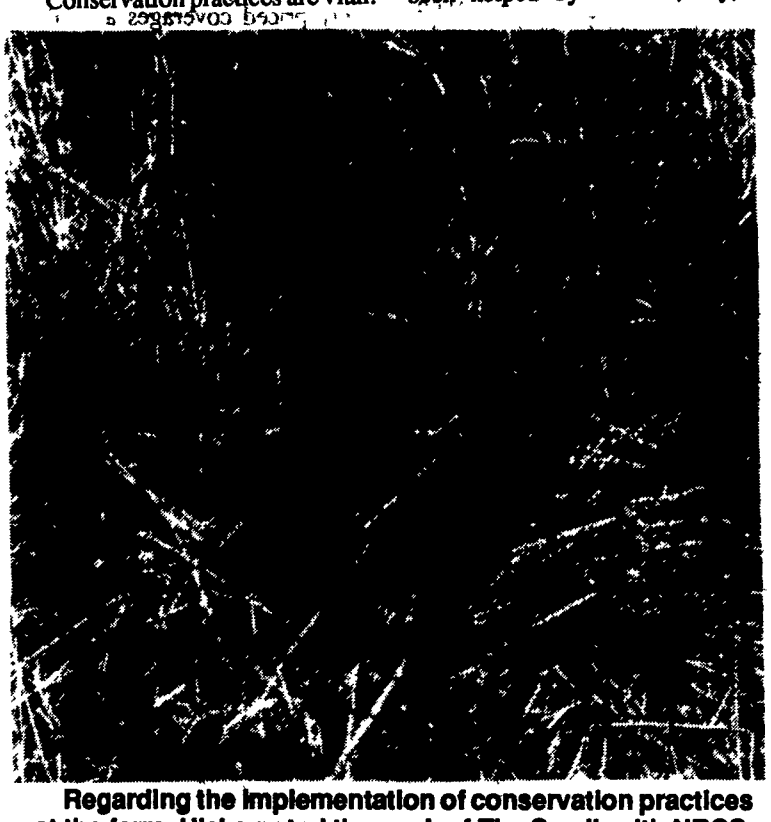
While using environmental sound ag practices, Hicks believes that as farmers, they can "still remain afloat in these tough times." In the process of converting from strictly dairying to maintaining land for wildlife, Hicks said he had to "relearn and rethink" agriculture.

As a result, instead of worrying about seeding times, the weather, and harvest logistics, John and Jay Hicks spend a good deal of time looking at wildlife management. That includes managing the deer.

"We're overloaded with deer," said John. To keep the deer population in line, the farm relies on the work of Tom Marsh, formerly with he Pennsylvania Game Commission, to hold structured hunting outings each year.

Small mammals and other wildlife — such as raccoons, groundhogs, fox, and skunks — have to be kept in check with traps set up by Marsh. The worst predator is the common house cat, a real chal-

(Turn to Page A25)



Regarding the implementation of conservation practices at the farm, Hicks noted the work of Tim Small, with NRCS. Small's work of laying out the fields provided the basic outlines of the constant "food and cover, food and cover" system in place for the wildlife, Hicks said.

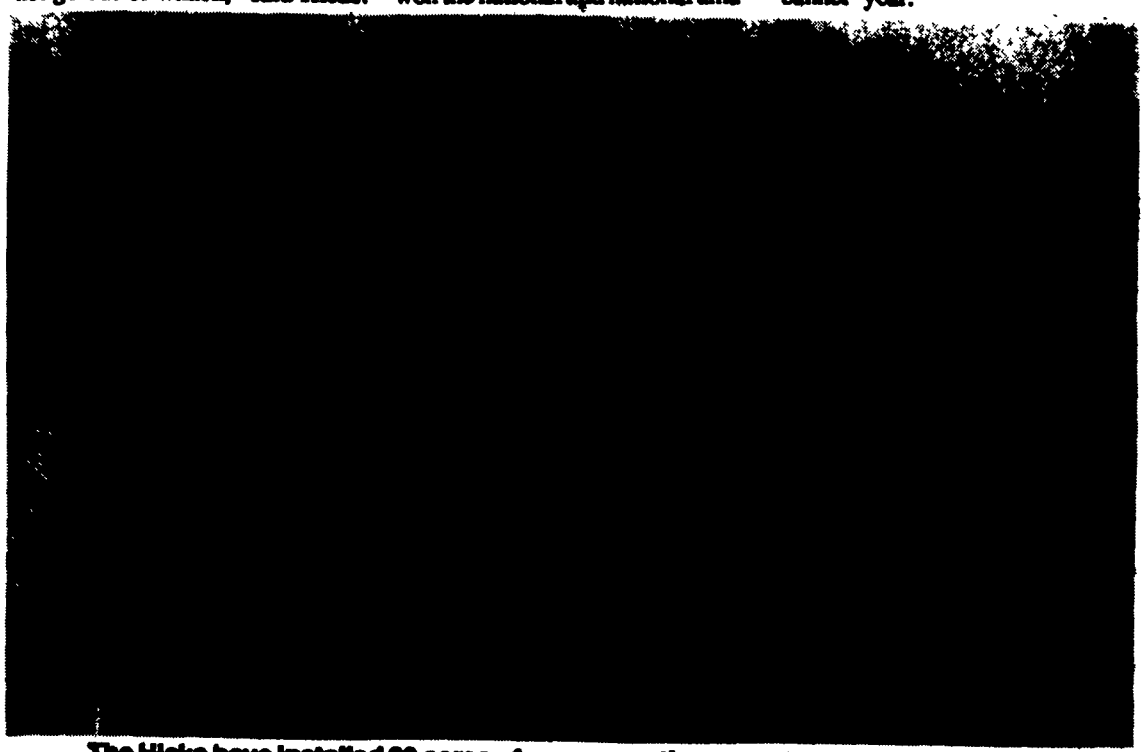
"We have to keep the predators in check so that the balance does not go out of whack," said Hicks. "The predator control is integral in the overall management strategy."

Last year was been a banner year for owner McDevitt, who won the national apd national amateur championships with her dogs in Santa Nella, Calif. last October. Winning the conservation farmer of the year honor also topped off a banner year.



The Hicks have installed 80 acres of a conservation cropping system, contour strip cropping, and grasses and legumes in rotation, according to the district. There is also a one-acre grassed waterway, 12 acres of no-till switchgrass seedings, one acre of critical area plantings, and 131.9 acres of crop residue use. Some quail make their way through the brush. Here Jay, left, and John inspect the VA-70 Leopedeus used as borders.

Regarding the implementation of conservation practices at the farm, Hicks noted the work of Tim Smail, with NRCS. Smail's work of laying out the fields provided the basic outlines of the constant "food and cover, food and cover" system in place for the wildlife, Hicks said.

Overall, Hicks noted that it has been a lot of fun developing a wildlife habitat. "I thought a great deal about what it means to be a conservationist," he said.

Hicks is married to Linda and has five children: Laurie, 25; Jay, 22; Beth, 18; and twins Andrew and Steven, 9.

Near the heavily urbanized Newtown Square area, all areas are under protection. Development pressures have stepped up in the years since Hicks has managed the farm. "It's a true megalopolis," Hicks noted.

He remembers when moving equipment on the roads with heavy traffic was one of the "greatest and most dangerous challenges," he said. Fortunately, the farm is self-contained and set back a distance from major roads.

"We need to be ever-mindful of water pollution and soil runoff," Hicks said. "Soil and water are our two greatest resources. It's simply important that we do so for future generations."

Workers' Compensation Group Declares Dividend

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Dairyfax Safety Group 481, a program administered by Agri-Service Agencies, Inc. (ASA) that provides workers' compensation insurance to farmers in New York state, declared a 60 percent return of premium dividend for its policyholders.

"More than $500,000 will be returned this spring to nearly 580 farmers in the group," said Craig Buckhout, president of Agri-Service Agencies, Inc. The dividend, he explained, was the result of low claims experience within the group for the past years, as well as sound management practices.

In each of the past eight years, a dividend has been returned to subscribers, averaging 50 percent of premiums paid, according to Buckhout. The dividend is in addition to up-front discounted rates.

Workers' compensation insurance is among the many competitively priced coverages available through ASA. For more than 25 years, Agri-Service Agencies, Inc. has provided health insurance and other employee benefit programs to dairy farmers and other small agri-business owners across the Northeast.

Agri-Service Agencies, Inc. is a wholly owned insurance subsidiary of Dairyfax, a Syracuse-based, agricultural service organization, cooperatively owned by dairy farmers throughout the Northeast. Dairyfax markets more than 4.5 billion pounds of milk annually and participates, and is invested in a milk marketing network stretching from Maine to Maryland to Ohio.

weight. But research is being done that shows by feeding a liquid supplement, birds will experience a gain of ¾ percent despite the 12-hour feed withdrawal.

"If such supplements could be used during food withdrawals, significant weight gain could result," Weaver said. Several food supplements already have FDA approval so that at this point, the question is to determine which supplements work best rather than trying to develop a new one.

Artificial insemination is also being performed on broiler breeds and offers promise for producing bigger birds at a younger age.

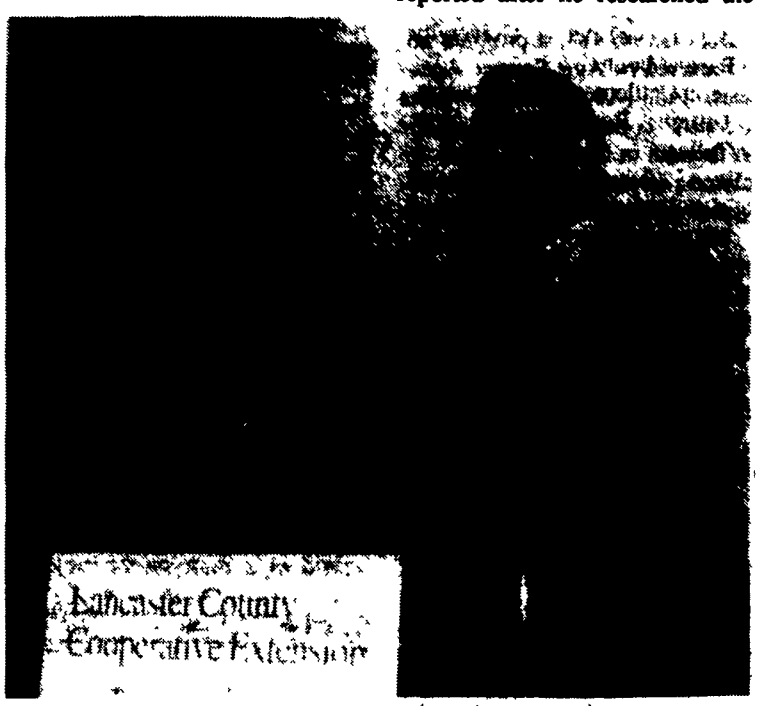
In addition to several bird-associated diseases, scientists are determining the relationship between rapid growth and heart attacks in birds.

Continual research is done on poultry waste recycling by examining the nutrient composition of waste and how it is disposed whether in shells, air, or manure.

Better cages, conveyors, packers are being designed to decrease egg cracks and breakage.

Because research shows that nipple drinkers are better for broilers and pullets, scientists are assured turkeys too could profit from nipple drinkers. At this point, a suitable nipple has not been developed that keeps turkeys from nippling them or enables large turkeys to consume the amount of water needed.

What makes some producers more profitable than others? It's the little things, Dr. Michael Hulet reported after he researched the question by visiting both top and low performers.



Dr. William Weaver explains recent poultry research being conducted in the new Penn State facilities.

Lancaster County Poultry Association officers join with speakers at Poultry Progress Days held in Lancaster on Thursday. Seated from left are Ken McMasters, Dr. Andre Ziegler, Dr. Patty Dunn, and Dr. Paul Patterson. Standing from left are John Mattilo, Andy Long, Doug Metzler, George Georges, Andy Bradford, Tim Hartsough, Don Brubaker, and Dr. John Schwartz.

Those little things that produce big differences included spending more time with birds, maintaining consistent temperature and good air, having house properly prepared for the season, correctly maintaining equipment, and proper record keeping to document performances.

"You can tell from the outside of the house what the inside looks like," Hulet said of his on-farm visits. By this he meant that if clutter, junk and debri were stacked around the outside of a chicken house, it generally looked the same way inside. Outside clutter and hay stacked against chicken houses provides rat hiding places.

Insulated panels and covers that can easily be uses to cover or uncover fans needed should be installed to keep inside temperatures as even as possible. While a small crack between doors might be considered insignificant, keep in mind that chickens are attracted to light and it lures them away from even temperatures, food, and comfort, which will result in more mortality.

Because 70 percent of the cost in raising birds is attributed to feed, every thing possible should be done not to overfeed and to prevent spillage. Water leaks induce sore feet and other illnesses in chickens.

Dr. Patty Dunn gave an update on avian disease. While there has been confirmed cases in a guinea fowl and in a commercial flock, Dunn said that "we are not experiencing an outbreak of clinical AI in Pennsylvania."

However, she stressed the need for extreme caution to avoid an outbreak.

Dunn showed slides to demonstrate how diagnostic tests of avian diseases are identified and the clinical symptoms associated with both AI and other viral diseases.

"Symptoms include depressed appearance, low egg production, and may have some shell abnormalities. Dark swollen, blistered combs, swelling around the eyes, head tilt, and sudden mortality are signs of AI but are also signs of other viral diseases so it is necessary to have lab testing. Although antibodies kick into an infected chicken within five days after contracting AI, the virus remains and will spread through litter, feathers,

FARM FORUM

Got Milk?

Hi! I'm Angela Werley, the Pennsylvania State Dairy Princess. I live in Berks County on Phil-Don Farm with my parents, two sisters and brother. We milk 65 Holsteins and farm 150 acres. As dairy princess, I promote milk and dairy products to people of all ages. I'd like to share with you a speech entitled "Got Milk" which received an honorable mention award at the State Pageant.

Got milk? It's the slogan that has been seen and heard by Americans on TV and radio for the past year. It 's a catchy phrase that gets people's attention but did you ever stop and think about an answer? Do you "Got Milk" — is it in your refrigerator right now? Is it part of your daily diet? Is it in your food pyramid? Is its calcium in your bones? Is it tempting your taste buds?

Yes, Pennsylvania you've got milk! But can we guarantee that 10 years from now we will have milk?

Being a farmer's daughter and growing up within the dairy industry, I can answer that question with a confident "YES!" Even though the number of American dairy farms are decreasing, the remaining farms are very efficient and capable of supplying this country with more than enough milk.

Dairy farmers have a very important occupation. They devote their lives to give the public quality milk, working seven days a week, 365 days a year. Do they ever get recognized for their efforts? Most of them, probably not but then again farmers are a modest people who don't want a lot of attention, they just want to be appreciated.

I am very proud to be a farmer's daughter and I can appreciate a dairy farmer's hard work. My grandfather, who is 81 years old, has farmed all his life and still continues to help out on our family farm not because he has to but because he is so dedicated to the dairy industry. He has farmed through both good and bad times and will continue to work as long as the Lord allows him to.

My father is very much like my grandfather, he is hardworking and takes pride in his livelihood. He has taught me that work builds character and that one can never have enough character. I always disagree with him because with all the chores that I have done growing up, I think I have plenty of character!

These are just two personal examples of farmers and there are many more just like them throughout Pennsylvania and the United States. I think you will find that all farmers share the same basic qualities — honesty, wisdom, responsibility, a love for animals and respect for the land.

Dairy farmers play a special role in our society, especially in Pennsylvania because agriculture is the state's number one industry. Each farmer produces enough to feed 129 people. Dairy farmers are truly a unique type of people although their number is decreasing all the time with less than 2% of the population being farmers. They need and deserve our respect and appreciation for making such an important contribution to our society.

Where would we be without dairy farmers? No milk in the refrigerator, no mozzarella cheese on your pizza, no vanilla ice cream for your cherry pie. Not only would our taste buds suffer but so would our health. There are no substitutes that can measure up the nutrition in "REAL" dairy products.

I believe in REAL dairy products — they are in my refrigerator right now. They are part of my daily diet and complete my food pyramid. I have strong bones from milk's calcium and I love its great taste. Yes, I "Got Milk!" And I hope you do too!

worked only to 3 weeks, when mold started to form.

Sarah indicated that textbooks would show that the pH of the albumin would rise to 8 when molding. She found out the pH actually dropped to 6.4.

Sarah is considering choosing a degree in food science and studying the biological sciences in a four-year college. She is enrolled in honors biology at Hempfield. Her adviser at Hempfield is Robert H. Hertzler.

A future project for her school will involve looking at the variables involved in preserving eggs without refrigeration.

Charity Irvine

Charity Irvine, 17, daughter of Keith and Rebecca Irvine, Ephrata, is a senior at Ephrata High School.

Charity won third place in the biology division of the fair with her project, "Molting Away the Bacteria."

Charity was inspired by an article her adviser, Patricia Wee, handed her regarding research into how bacteria could promote degradation of keratin in bird feathers from Wesleyan University. The article in the university's magazine reviewed some of the research about how the bacteria was degrading the feathers and looked at the environmental conditions present to cause the degradation.

After Charity contacted the university, they sent her jars containing feathers from White Leghorn chickens. Charity looked at the effects of high humidity, moisture, and other conditions compared to control studies using two strains of the same bacteria, called Bacillus lichenformis: Strains 138B and 188B.

What she found was that the 188B strain worked better when the jar was shaken and contained 100 percent humidity. She found the 138B strain to create high test weight differences because of a combination of the bacteria with the medium used, bonding with feathers to cause feather weight gain.

Charity and the university are looking into some of the reasons why birds "molt" or lose their fathers. Could it be the bacteria alone? Could it be the interaction of the bacteria and hormones? Researchers still don't know.

One of the practical uses of this research would be to make the feathers useful as livestock feed. The research could help find a way to allow the bacteria to break down the keratin, which impedes digestion of the feathers for feed. Charity said there are 225,000 pounds of waste feathers generated in the industry every year, which could translate someday into a lot of feed.

Charity plans to attend either Harvard or Cornell to study the social sciences with plans for graduate school. She enjoys two of her advanced placement courses: European History and Composition Language, in addition to Chemistry II and physics.

This year she enjoys advanced placement literature and psychology.

Janelle Hoover

Janelle Hoover, 15, is the daughter of Marty and Lois Hoover, Schoeneck. She is a sophomore at Ephrata High School and won an honorable mention with her project, "The Effects of Feed Protein Content On Growth Rate and Litter Size of Mice."

Janelle is enrolled in Ag Science II at Ephrata. Janelle, who lives on a 2½ acre farmette, said the idea of looking into the effects of protein feed on mice came about because she already was raising 2,000 mice upstairs in the barn and looking at the effects of feed on their growth.

The enterprise came about as a result of a church project which challenged the family to take $5 and multiply it. They purchased the mice from a pet store. The mice were placed in plastic storage containers with wire covers and a place for feed and water bottles.

At her farm, a total of 180 containers hold the mice. She brought 96 mice to school to further study the effects of feed.

Janelle looked into three methods to cut feed costs. One feed plan used a control feed (pellets with 16 percent protein), one plain corn, and the other plain soybeans.

Her results — with corn, there was little gain but the mice looked good. With soybeans, the rate of gain was improved but the mice lacked energy. With the control feed, the mice tripled in weight.

Janelle split the entire mouse population into two separate groups, control and test. The groups were separated into two divisions: breeders and growers. She looked at the reproduction rate of the growers on the different feed and looked at the gain of the growers.

Of the growers, there were three groups: of each group, two were fed the control, two were fed the corn, and two were fed soybeans. The same happened with the breeders.

The results? With all the groups, the mice on corn "looked nicer" Janelle said, but the rate of gain and other factors improved with the ice on soybeans.

Janelle, who enjoys World Cultures, Biology, and English at Ephrata, plans to study large animal veterinary medicine at Penn State. She is enrolled in advanced placement biology at Ephrata.

Project adviser at Ephrata is ag science instructor Jodi L. Brown.

Joanne Zimmerman

Joanne Zimmerman, who is enrolled in Ag Science III and Plant Science I at Ephrata, won first place for her unique physics project, "The Effects of the Invisible on the Visible."

Joanne, 17, is the daughter of David and Joyce Zimmerman, Reinholds.

The Ephrata High School junior's project involved studying air resistance (the invisible factor) on a bullet (the visible) and how different bullet shapes effect speed and targeting.

Joanne got the idea from a suggestion from one of her family members. She studied two different bullets: round-nose and spitzer-(pointed) nose, both hollow points. The bullets were 7 mm caliber fired from an XP-100 Remington pistol.

She spent a lot of time researching the project and read about 18 books on ballistics, trajectories, air resistance, and other factors. She used equipment to determine the exact velocity of the bullets.

What Joanne found was that the aerodynamics determined how much air resistance was a factor in slowing the bullet down. The spitzer bullet was more accurate because it was delivered to the target quicker — the round-nose slowed down and was less accurate. The more air resistance there is, the more time the bullet has to fall down and away from the target.

The research methodology Joanne used, she believes, can be "applied to any area of science." Joanne used Publisher software on her home computer to put together a brochure on her project. She made use of a digital camera and scanner at the school, along with other software, to compile the extensive graphics and charts for her project.

Her project adviser at Ephrata is Larry E. Hess.

Joanne has looked into a couple of two-year and four-year colleges and may pursue a career in graphics. She is enrolled in Ag Science III and Plant Science I. Her favorite course is Communications II.

Oberholtzer

Greiner spoke at the banquet, trying to dispel the myth that the school is an "all-boys" school, pointing out that of 35 students the past year, 10 were girls. "We all need to be exposed to conservation education," he said.

B. Frank Lucas, leader of the Pequea-Mill Creek Project, was honored for his work. Lucas spoke briefly about the water quality efforts of the project, encompassing some 135,000 acres and more than 1,000 farms in the Pequea-Mill Creek watershed. He said the watershed has about 55,000 cows — "The heaviest concentration of dairy cows anywhere in the U.S.," he said. "They're really packed in."

Lucas spoke about the benefits of streambank fencing to promote herd health, water quality, and wildlife and fish habitat.

In addition, Nancy Burkhart was honored with a special award for her contributions to the district. The Keystone Chapter of the Soil and Water Conservation Society presented a special award to Steve Groff of Cedar Meadow Farms for the promotion of no-till agriculture in vegetable and other crops on his farm.

Two individuals from the Lititz Run watershed were honored for conservation work — Harold Alleman of the Lititz Sportsmen's Association and Greg Wilson, president of the local chapter of Trout Unlimited.

Longacre's Modern Dairy Refits For Organic Processing

tinuing that designation.

As a benefit of relatively small size, the working relationships and communications between producer, management and processor are open and free-flowing.

Natural Dairy Products Corp. also works in cooperation with Sunnyland Dairy in New York and both work with a common organic milk processor, Longacre's Modern Dairy Inc., located along Rt. 100, in Barto, Berks County.

Sunnyland is a large processor of fluid milk and had been seeking to test the waters of the organic milk market.

Sunnydale now markets organic milk in New York and north, while Natural Dairy Products Corp. sells the Natural By Nature brand in Pennsylvania and south of New York.

Ned's background included college, but he had long had a strong desire to dairy farm on his own, or to be somehow involved with dairy farming.

With a solid college education and an ability to adapt to differing job demands, Susan had a varied, but challenging work history including working for an organic foods distributor and an accountant, and she is computer literate.

While working for the organic foods distributor, she had worked with Comstock. The MacArthurs and Comstock discussed and envisioned the opportunities and potential for a market for locally produced, fresh organic milk, especially with a segment of the public's perceptions of the quality of chain-store dairy products and high-production farming techniques.

Dairy farmers involved in organic dairying, in general, have been practicing intensive grazing and low-input farming to try to keep capital and equipment requirements down, and thus return rates higher.

Because it can take three years of applying higher-management/ increased risk organic farming techniques before qualifying to sell milk through the organic market, the pool of producers is still small, but those who converted several years ago are beginning to reap the benefits, while others are working to come on line.

But in it all, accepting the risk of losing their current position in life is the biggest challenge that all people involved have had to be willing to accept.

For the most part, the acceptance of that risk came from understanding what they wanted for themselves, what they had to lose, how well they could adapt to learning new and different practices, and how strong was their belief that the goal of taking the risk was the right thing to pursue.

Dan Longacre Jr., 58, grew up in a family dairy processing business that started in 1920 with his grandfather John Longacre milking cows and then delivering raw milk from the farm to local homes via horse and wagon.

In 1942, as technology and regulations changed with regard to health considerations and processing, the Longacre dairy was established at its current site. That was when the dairy started doing pasteurization and homoginization.

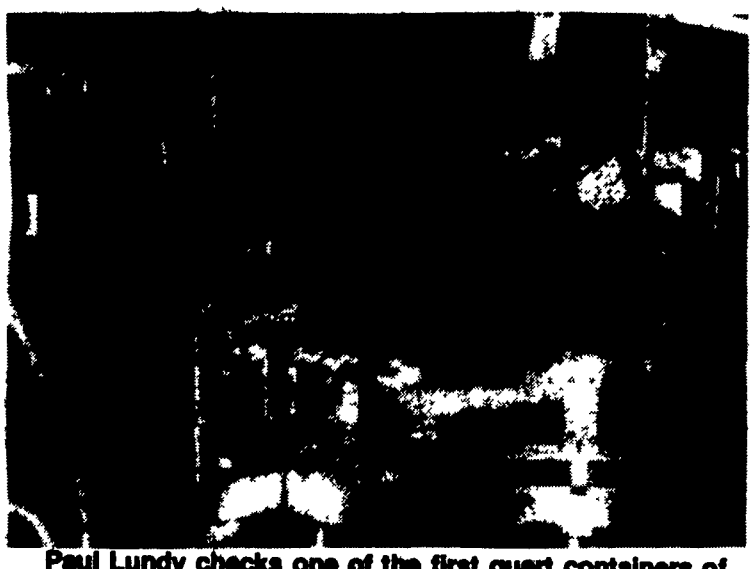
In 1948, the plant began making ice cream. Ice cream mixes started being made in the early 1950s.

Longacre's Modern Dairy is a small family-owned dairy processing plant. All management leadership belongs to Dan and his siblings. It is analagous to the one-family dairy farm, instead of the large incorporated farm.

Counting everyone, there are about 40 employees.

More to the point, it has continued to serve its community in providing fresh dairy product, though competition from the large chain-store distributors, processors and producers helped to bring an end to many similarly small dairies that had been common during the earlier part of this century.

The Longacre Modern Dairy is a family concern. Seated, from the left is Timothy Longacre, Kathryn Longacre, and Dan Longacre III. From the left, standing, is Dan Longacre Jr. and Newton Longacre. All are siblings involved with the family business, except for Dan III, Dan Jr.'s son.



Paul Lundy checks one of the first quart containers of organic milk on the run to make sure of packaging quality.

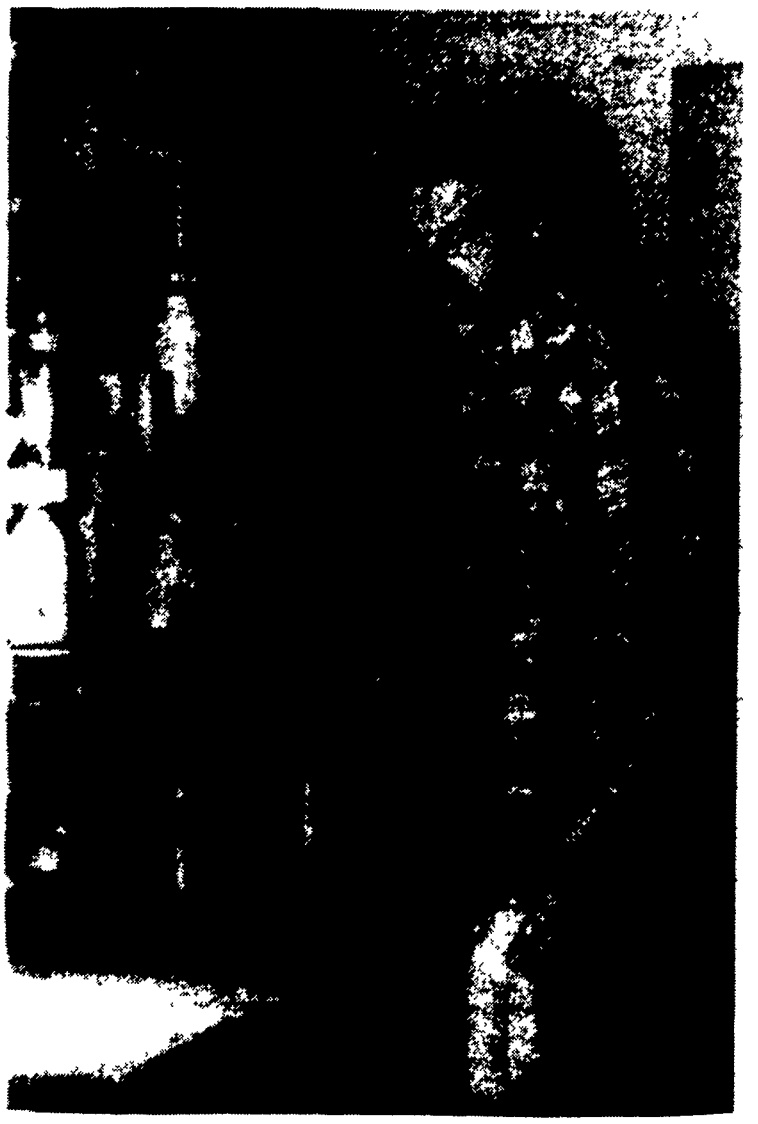
It's location along Rt.100 helps bring regular out-of-town business. It is a popular stop with vacationing tourists on their way to either the mountains or the ocean.

Longacre's Modern Dairy is visually a remnant of the mid-1900s, with its own ice cream made on location and its own flavors. It has a dairy bar counter and booths, as well as a cold case.

It has an old Bally case in the dairy bar, which also is a remnant of the cold case manufacturing

(Turn to Page A31)

Longacre's Modern Dairy was started in 1920 on the farm of John Longacre. It moved to this site in 1942 and emphasized ice cream and fresh milk. It is now refitted and is processing organic milk while maintaining its own ice cream and milk processing.



Dwight Ruth, son-in-law of Dan Longacre, bottles unhomoginized organic whole milk, one of the fluid milk products processed and packaged at Longacre's Modern Dairy.

Paul Ludy packages organic milk in bulk 5-gallon bags for use in manufactured product, such as yogurt or sour cream.

Joe Doran, truck driver and distribution manager for Natural Dairy Products prepares to load up pallets of boxed, refrigerated organic milk within several hours of the milk being delivered to the processing plant. The milk is cooled at the farm, and except for pasteurization, is kept at optimum cold temperatures all the way through the plant, before being loaded into a refrigerated truck.

company that was located in nearby Bally. It is a widely known company, but out of business.

Nostalgia for the earlier time, in addition to high quality product apparently is what keeps the Longacre's Modern Dairy business alive.

And while the organic processing does not promise the Longacre family a guarantee of longevity in the dairy business, Dan said it figures prominently in the family company business plan to achieve continued prosperity.

The dairy receives, processes and packages "regular" milk, as well as organic milk.

Dan said the venture required him to install a separate system to handle organic milk, because the integrity of the milk must be maintained in order to ensure the loyalty of customers.

Since June last year, Dan said that the dairy has been processing about 10,000 gallons of organic milk per week, as a rough estimate. The plant has the capacity to keep about 20,000 gallons in refrigerated tanks.

For the organic production, the milk is received from a dedicated milk tanker truck, marked as containing organic milk that contains, "No pesticides. No hormones. No antibiotics."

It is pumped into a receiving tank that handles nothing but organic milk and travels through pipelines that carry nothing but organic milk.

Instead of using chemical sanitizers to clean tanks and lines, Dan said they went with a non-chemical treatment — 200 degree water for a minimum of 15 minutes.

And, so as to prevent any comingling of organic milk with regular milk, he removed valves and reworked the lines so that when the plant is preparing to do a run of organic milk, and the bottling equipment has been cleaned with the non-chemical treatment, workers have to manually install short sections of pipeline.

Everything was done to emphasize the purity of the organic milk and the integrity of the product.

Longacre said it took some time to refit the dairy, and is a risk, but added, "It's a new venture (for Longacre's). We all discussed it, and felt is was right and so we tackled it."

When the milk arrives, the tanker is tested. Longacre's has a limited, but useful laboratory in the upstairs where some tests can be run. Other tests have to be outsourced.

Daniel said he started in his family business as a 12-year-old working with his mother at the dairy bar, but then he was always tagging along with his father, Daniel.

He stayed with the business.

Longacre's Modern Dairy

According to Longacre, the organic business represents an opportunity for the small processor.

Because of its limitations, it can't be expected to compete with volume production. The organic market offers an opportunity to specialize and build expertise and a reputation early in the development of a new market.

Being small actually gives the processor an edge, because the organic market is not expected to grow large in comparison to the size of the non-organic dairy industry. A large processor would most likely find the trouble of adding a dedicated organic processing system not worth the trouble.

Longacre said that while the family is excited about the opportunity to be involved in the business, and strongly supports organic dairying, it is too early to determine whether processing organically is financially a better business venture from a strict bottom-line standpoint.

But at the same time, in the months that the business has been processing organically, it hasn't suffered.

There are some extra costs to processing and packaging for organic.

There's a little more labor involved. At the Longacre's plant, there's extra labor to install pipeline instead of merely turning the handle on a valve in order to switch from organic to regularly produced milk.

The organic milk, in this case, also requires corrugated boxes and palletizing them for shipment. That adds labor costs and overhead to the product, on top of the already higher raw product cost.

The bottom line is, for right now, an increased profit margin for the processor is yet to be realized, in terms of dollars gained versus dollars invested.

But Dan takes the organic milk home for his own consumption. He said the value is there. He said he believes that after people taste the product and get to understand it better, demand will increase.

"It tastes cleaner," Dan said, searching for words. "People always ask how it tastes. They expect it to taste different than regular milk. But it tastes better. It tastes ... cleaner!"

He said that some people think that a product has to taste "organic" to be "organic." He said that those unfamiliar with the milk seem to have a preconception that organic milk will taste less flavorfull somehow.

He said the reality is that the promotion for the milk is that it tastes better.

The milk, a good percentage coming from colored breed cows, is delivered quickly and processed and bottled and shipped, for the most part, the same day.

The plant bottles organic product on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Friday. On Thursday, organic light cream and half and half are processed, packaged and shipped for sale Friday.

It also bottles a non-homoginized organic whole milk for a specialty market. There are some who believe that unhomoginized milk digests better because the fat globules suspended in milk are not absorbed into the blood stream, as it is believed homoginized fat globules are absorbed.

A women called the MacArthurs recently to inquire as to what they did differently with their unhomoginized milk, because she didn't have any trouble digesting it. Ned didn't make up some story on the spot.

Instead, he listened and then told her how organic milk is made — if it digests better for her, good. A demand has been supplied. A customer has been satisfied and will most likely be returning.

But again a premium has to be placed upon the price of that milk. Just for starters, the returnable deposit bottles associated with the unhomoginized milk adds to the cost of doing business and cleaning the bottles requires additional labor and attention to "organic" techniques.

Natural Dairy Products also offers several flavors of organic yogurt shakes and the other dairy products, though they are manufactured elsewhere.

The organic milk destined for use in manufactured dairy products other than drinking milks is processed and packaged in 6-gallon bags that are sent to a Long Island plant for manufacture into organic yogurt and cream cheese.

"I think the time is right for it," Dan said. "I think that 10 years ago, if we would have tried it, it wouldn't have worked. It's a little too early to tell, but we're looking into the future."

USDA To Hold CRP Signup

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture is holding a signup for its Conservation Reserve Program March 28, said Janet L. Oertly, state conservationist for the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS).

Farm Service Agency and NRCS are the primary USDA agencies involved in this program.

Under this signup, USDA will target the most environmentally sensitive land for inclusion into the program, Oertly said.

"USDA will select the acreage to enter the program after reviewing each offer submitted from the pool of eligible land. We will enroll only the most environmentally sensitive lands to ensure we get the most environmental benefits using the fewest dollars possible," she said.

USDA Secretary Dan Glickman recently announced the signup and the release of the final CRP regulations.

The newly released rules, effective Feb. 19, increased the pool of eligible acres, making it possible to achieve the three primary goals of the CRP — erosion, water quality improvement, and wildlife habitat enhancement.

The final rules define eligible cropland as land that has been planted or considered planted to an agricultural commodity two of the five most recent crop years and must be capable of being planted to an agricultural commodity.

Also, the final rules make marginal pastureland eligible if it will be used as a riparian buffer to be planted to trees.

Eligible cropland also must meet one of the following criteria to be offered for enrollment in CRP:

- Have an Erodibility Index (EI) of 8 or higher or be considered highly erodible land according to the conservation compliance provisions outlined in the 1985 Food Security Act (Redefined fields must have an EI of 8 or higher);
- Be a cropped wetland;
- Be devoted to highly beneficial environmental practices, such as filter strips, riparian buffers, grass waterways and wellhead protection areas;
- Be located in a national or state CRP conservation priority area; or
- Be cropland associated with or surrounding non-cropped wetlands.

Both the Chesapeake Bay and the Great Lakes are designated as national conservation priority areas because retiring agricultural lands in these areas offer the potential for significant improvements to water quality or wildlife habitat, Oertly said.

In addition, state priority areas can be designated. The three areas in Pennsylvania are Tulpehocken Creek, Berks and Lebanon counties; Maiden Creek in Berks and Lehigh counties, and Shenango Creek in Crawford, Mercer and Lawrence counties.

USDA will rank all eligible CRP offers using an Environmental Benefits index (EBI). The EBI is used to evaluate and rank offers based on the potential environmental benefits of enrolling the land in the CRP.

The criteria used to determine the EBI rankings include benefits to wildlife habitat, erosion control, water quality, air quality, and cost.

USDA's goal is to enroll those acres into the program where the benefits to the national land retirment outweigh the benefits of keeping the land in agricultural production.

CRP soil rental rates will reflect the reality of local market values, Oertly said.

The 1997 Agriculture Approprations Act prevents the extension of any CRP contracts. Producers with contracts expiring Sept. 30, 1997 may offer their acreage for re-enrollment during the March signup.

Simultaneously, producers may also offer acreage during a continuous signup for certain practices on environmentally sensitive cropland, such as riparian areas, waterways, and contour buffer strips.

For more information about the program, contact your local FSA or NRCS office. They are located under the U.S. Department of Agriculture's listing in your telephone book.

Dairy Stewardship Task Force Convenes

SOUTHAMPTON (Bucks Co.) — Members of the Dairy Network Partnership (DNP) and Atlantic Dairy Cooperative (ADC) met with the newly founded Stewardship Education Task Force to begin a collective effort toward a unification of ecological and agricultural interests.

The Task Force, which is comprised of 10 southeastern Pennsylvania dairy farmers, was established to collaborate on DNP efforts in several projects, including a mini-grant project, low-interest loan prospects, farmer based education forums, the Environmental Farmstead Evaluation, a cost and benefit project and stewardship recognition propositions.

Participants on the Task Force share a commitment to the sustainability of dairy farming as well as dedication to the preservation of natural resources.

The activities of the group focus on the development of effective methods of meeting both economic and environmental goals.

Members are charged with providing input to DNP projects which directly affect the dairy industry in Pennsylvania.

Lori Sandman, project leader, said, "We understand the sacrifice the volunteer membes of the Task Force will be making to attend the meetings. We also realize that their input is vital to successfully accomplishing our objectives."

The program was officially begun on Feb. 27 with the first full Task Force meeting. The meetings are slated to convene quarterly.

Task Force members were provided with an agenda and background information about scheduled topics prior to the meeting. DNP staff presented progress reports on current programs and overviews of proposed projects. Task Force members responded with suggestions and concerns about DNP projects and the effectiveness of the DNP activities.

The Mini-Grant project was discussed, which provides financial assistance of up to $500 to support the costs of implementing pasture and stream management practices.

The project was initiated in the fall of 1996, and funding has been approved for seeding and fencing of rotational exercise lots, stream crossing and cattle lane stabilization using hog slats, and stream fencing.

DNP Mini-grants may also be used for stream crossings in conjunction with funding for stream bank fencing by the PA Game Commission, the Chesapeake Bay Program, or county Conservation Districts.

Through an application process, mini-grant funds are being approved and implemented, according to Leon Weber, On-farm Coordinator for the DNP.

Members discussed the prospect of low interest loans as a means of enabling farmers to install pollution control measures.

As a model for the proposed program, the Delaware Program was investigated, which offers loans up to $100,000 over 10 years at a 3 percent interest rate. Eligible projects for loan use include a wide range of waste management and resource management systems and equipment.

A list of Best Management Practices was catalogued and prioritized by the members of the Task Force for cost and benefit evaluation. The narrowed list of practices will be the focus of detailed literature research for discussion at the next meeting.

The DNP will compile the results into a useful cost and benefit information package for distribution to farmers and others interested in dairy stewardship.

In order to improve pollution management and productivity, many farmers are using the Environmental Farmstead Evaluation to assess on-farm conditions. Based on the national Farm"A"Syst Program, this evaluation provides useful data to the farmer on which management practices are working and where focusing resources might be beneficial. Participation in an evaluation is voluntary and requires no obligation from the participants. Task Force members were given the opportunity to volunteer their farmsteads for evaluation, and to serve as a resource for other farmers interested in evaluations of their farms.

Various farm-based education forums were suggested as a source of information on stewardship practices. Conferences and field events provide current information and working examples of farms which participate in the discussed practices. Activities such as pasture walks enable farmers to observe working practices at neighboring farmsteads.

In addition to financial support, members of the task force suggested that stewardship recognition is an important incentive for stewardship management changes. Methods of identification and selection of candidates for recognition were discussed, as well as the awards which would most encourage farmers to adopt new practices.

The Task Force will contribute its expertise to another DNP effort known as the Joint Best Management Practices Plan. The Plan, launched with the other Dairy Network Partners which include the Rodale Institute, Chesapeake Bay Foundation, Penn State University, Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture, and the U.S. EPA, will include all activities developed and implemented by the DNP.

Task Force members will contribute suggestions on how to expand the scope of the project to include all ADC members.

"The Atlantic Dairy Cooperative is pleased to be taking an active part in the process of improving environmental quality and enhancing the profitability of our members. Members who participate in the Task Force will be instrumental in developing a practices plan that may include all ADC members," said Laura England, director of communications for the Atlantic Dairy Cooperative.

The mission of the Dairy Network Partnership is to improve environmental quality and enhance the profitability of the region's dairy farmers. The Partnership will also continue to support cost share reform and promote the use of practices that improve environmental quality in a cost-effective way. Atlantic Dairy Cooperative members interested in becoming a member of the Stewardship Education Task Force should contact Laura England at (800) 645-6455 or Lori Sandman at (610) 683-1476.

Poultry Progress Day Highlights Research

flies, rodents, egg flats, and people. It takes only one gram of viral particles about the size of a dime to infect one million chickens.

Dunn stressed the need for biosecurity to keep the virus from entering the farm. Some of the measures taken should be to control movement of people, poultry, and equipment. Sanitation at all levels, and avoiding any contact with wild birds or with the urban live bird market.

Dr. John Schwartz, Lancaster County's extension director, reported on the need to be a friendly neighbor. Less farms and more development has resulted in cultural diversity and different values. While farmers may prefer to look out their windows and see only farmland, their neighbors who come from cities often feel uncomfortable if there are less than 15 homes surrounding them.

Based on personal experience, Schwartz said that he doesn't mean to be sexist, but men seem to be more tolerant of noises and smells than wives and it is the wife who generally spearheads efforts against farmers for smells and nusiances.

"Little gestures mean a lot toward keeping peace in changing neighborhoods. "Defuse high tension by being open and friendly, host covered dish picnic.

"People smell with their eyes," Schwartz said. An attractive farm gives the message that that bad smell can't be coming from there but from the unkept farm down the road. Plant grass buffers between fields and road to prevent soil runoff.

Schwartz encouraged community involvement and developing good public relations to form friendships.

"If you portray a hard-headed, I-was-here-first, and don't-complain-with-your-mouth-full attitude, I guarantee WWIII," he said.

At the same time, farmers need to be supportive of each other and form alliances by showing up at zoning hearings.

Dr. Charles Pitts reported that many poultry farmers ask about the effectiveness of the Little Bear composter. While data isn't sufficient, Pitts said that studies conducted show that the composter does keep manure dryer, kills more maggots resulting in less flies. However, he is concerned that amonia amounts go up during certain phases of the composting. Studies are being conducted to control the amount by adding cardboard, hay, and other substances.

Because it's $30,000 and too early to tell how that investment will last, Pitts said that it is impossible to advise whether or not the investment is worth it.

Fly control is being experimented by using the Maytown beetle, a predator of fly larvae. Studies show that the fly problem greatly decreases when chickens are molted and this may be the best time to spread manure so that it won't upset the neighbors.

Leon Ressler gave an update on nutrient management and water use registration, which had been reported on in previous articles in this paper.

Dr. Andre Ziegler spoke on fowl pow and showed slides identifying the disease and its variant strains. Pennsylvania is among a few of the highest states with the fowl pox problem with 34 cases being reported in the last 18 months. Production drops about 1-12 percent and some mortality increases infection.

Dr. Paul Patterson reported on trends in egg marketing. In the past 10 years, eggs sold through retail sales have dropped one percent, but liquid eggs sold through food services increased.

Bright spots for the future is that egg products, specialty egg, and export markets are growing. Farmers are encouraged to look into these options for selling eggs.

Specialty egg markets include nutritionally altered eggs, organic, fertile, welfare managed, and special diet eggs. Prices for specialty eggs have been noted as high as $4.38 a dozen compared.

Exports are up for both shell and egg products. With European markets concerned about egg safety, the frozen, dried and liquid egg market offers growing export potential. The highest shell exports are made to Hong Kong, Middle East, and Canada. The highest exports of egg products go to Japan, Mexico, and Canada.

"Remember a one percent change in domestic supply can mean a five percent increase in retail prices," Patterson said.

April F.O. 4 Milk $15.69

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Middle Atlantic Order Market Administrator Rex F. Lothrop today announced for April 1997 a Class I price of $15.69 per hundredweight and a Class II price of $12.76 per hundredweight.

The April Class I price includes the 20-cent assessment for fluid milk promotion and consumer education. The Class I price, less the 20-cent assessment, and the Class II price are up 52 cents from March but are 13 cents lower when compared to year earlier levels.

Mr. Lothrop announced a Class III milk price of $12.50 per hundredweight for February 1997 and a Class III-A price of $12.40 per hundredweight for the month.

The Class III price was up 51 cents from the previous month, and the Class III-A price increased 85 cents. The April 1997 Class I and Class II prices and the February 1997 Class III price are based on the February 1997 basic formula milk price of $12.46 per hundredweight at a 3.5 percent butterfat content.

The February 1997 butterfat price was $1.09 per pound, up 21.74 cents from January. The February skim milk price per hundredweight was $9.

The USDA reported that the wholesale price of Grade A butter at Chicago for February was 98.46 cents per pound on the mercantile exchange and the Central States nonfat dry milk price was $1.1491 per pound.

Carve A Butter Lamb For Easter

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

FAIRFIELD (Adams Co.) — Looking for a way to wow your Easter dinner guests?

You might want to try serving lamb. Or, in this case, a butter lamb.

"I visited my neighbor one day and she was making a butter lamb," recalls Phyllis "Dolly" Beachy, of 615 Fairfield Station Road. That was about 1975, according to Phyllis, and the neighbor was the late Helena Blanchfield, of Laurel, Maryland.

"The lamb so impressed me that I asked her to show me how to do it and went right home and made one," she adds. And Phyllis Beachy has been making at least one, often two, butter lambs for every Easter season since then.

The attractive, lamb-shaped butter has become a tradition at the annual Seder dinner served on Thursday night of Holy Week at Fairfield's St. John Lutheran Church, where the Beachy family are active members.

"But no one ever wants to cut into the lamb. They insist I make the first cut to mess it up," Phyllis grins.

Though the lamb has become one of Phyllis's trademarks, and she had taught several Adams County extension classes on how to create the attractive food piece, she is frustrated because of her lack of information on the lore behind the lamb.

"I think it has some religious background, perhaps in one of the European cultures," she speculates. She hopes that readers of Lancaster Farming might have some knowledge of the religious lore of the butter lamb and share that information.

Three and one-half sticks of butter, in the form of quarter-pound long sticks, is required to create the lamb. Phyllis recommends using all the butter from the same package, since different batches of butter may have subtle variations in color.

To fashion a butter lamb, unwrap a quarter-pound stick of butter and place on an attractive small serving dish or tray. From a second stick of butter, cut a slice just slightly larger than a tablespoon. Carefully cut away just part of the top half from the flat front of that slice, creating an "L" shape in the butter slice. This shaped piece serves as the face and muzzle of the lamb. Insert two whole cloves, for eyes, in the remaining top half of the "L" shaped slice.

Cut a second, smaller slice, about a teaspoon quantity, from the second stick of butter. Place it on one end of the quarter-pound stick, to add a neck and extra support for the head of the lamb. Place the "L"-shaped head section on top of that slice, then insert toothpicks through all sections to stabilize the head onto the body portion.

Cut another tablespoon slice of butter, and slice into four slivers of butter which will form the legs. Refrigerate to add later to the finished lamb.

Using the remaining butter, just slightly softened, push one tablespoon of butter at a time through a kitchen seive, using the back of a tablespoon, with a large dinner plate beneath to catch the seived butter. As the butter is forced through the seive, the tiny slivers will curl and slightly separate. Butter that is too soft will not form these tiny sections, which give the finished lamb a wooly-coat effect.

With the end of a table knife, transfer clusters of the seived butter curls to cover the stick of butter that forms the body of the lamb. Continue adding clusters of butter "wool" over the body and head, until the lamb shape is completely covred, except for the carved portion of the face slice with the clove eyes. Place the saved slivers of butter at appropriate positions along the base of one side of the body for the lamb's four legs, cutting tiny slices in the end of each sliver to resemble hooves.

Phyllis likes to add a tiny flag to her lamb, with the proclamation "He is risen!"

She writes the message on a tiny triangle-shaped flag cut from a Post-A-Note, fastening the sticky edge to a toothpick, then inserts the flag next to the lamb's front leg, as though the animal was displaying it.

Appropriate seasonal greenery, or perhaps a few small, edible blooms, can be tucked around the finished butter lamb as a colorful garnish.

Butter lambs can be made ahead of time and refrigerated or frozen. Before refrigerating or freezing, a few toothpicks should be inserted into the finished lamb shape at strategic spots, and the entire creation covered with plastic food wrap. The toothpicks will prevent the plastic wrap from marring the lamb's curly-wool texture.

Slightly softened butter, pushed through a selve, forms the "wooly" textured clusters that are carefully stuck to the foundation pieces for the lamb shape made by Phyllis "Dolly" Beachy.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

It seems to take that something special to get met to give my house that extra cleaning. But, when a dozen ladies are coming for a Bible Study, then I get to work and dust everything. Recently, someone told me that a layer of thin dust would protect furniture finish. If only that were true.

One of my big problems is getting sparkling clean windows. I've tried most every cleaner made and even used my grandmother's newspaper and vinegar method. But, they are still streaked. No wonder that people say, "I don't do windows."

Another job when company is coming is my many flower plants. They drop blossoms and sometimes leaves too. Even one or two will have to be relegated to the back porch. My three poinsettias are still fine but some begonias have seen better days. The pink kalanchoe is very pretty as is the orange one.

This year for a change, I shall have an amaryllis bloom. For so many years they have been growing only pretty leaves. It must be 50 years ago that a neighbor gave me my first bulb. When it bloomed about ten years ago, I got the camera and took a picture of it.

Next week we entertain our "Supper for Eight" group and I'll be glad that the cleaning is done. At least I do not have rag rugs that must be taken outside and beaten clean. My mother had this kind in her kitchen and they got very dirty. So, each Saturday they had to be cleaned. Now I complain that my new vaccuum is too heavy. It appears that we are never satisfied.

The Lovell family: Melana, Angela, Laura and Annette stand behind their parents, Marian, holding two-week-old grandson Adam, and Ralph, holding 17-month-old grandson Andrew.

Angela and Andrew give some extra nourishment to "Hercules," who tipped the scales at birth at 20 pounds. His twin sister "Zena" weighed in at a not so little 15 pounds.

Love Of Agriculture Ties This Family Together

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

LINDEN (Lycoming Co.) — Sitting in the Lovell's rural home surrounded by three generations, one couldn't help but feel the warmth and love that flowed from their hearts.

Like many close-knit families, that love is evident in their almost constant banter.

But for the Ralph and Marian Lovell, their four girls, Annette, Laura, Angela and Melana and now Laura's sons, Andrew, 1½ and Adam, 2 weeks, something else is very important. That something is agriculture.

Agriculture has been a way of life for the Lovells for many years. Ralph grew up on a neighboring dairy farm while Marian grew up on a dairy farm in Tioga County. After the two were married, Ralph milked cows on his home farm for several years until he got the opportunity to purchase the farm just up the road and full-time work as a mail carrier.

That was in 1978, the same year that their third girl, Angela, was born.

At that time they had five beef animals and would raise a lamb to butcher every year. They would also raise a couple of hogs to butcher.

Today they have about 30 beef cows, steers, and calves. They also have 28 breeding ewes, of which all but three gave birth to twins this year on their Maple Spring Farm.

They didn't actually get into the sheep business on a larger scale until Annette had her first 4-H market lamb project in 1980.

"I didn't like coming home to an empty barn," said Annette, "so that's how we got into the breeding sheep. The third year I got four sheep, they were Annie, Fannie Franie and Janie. I sold two as market projects and the other two were my first 4-H breeding ewes."

To expand and upgrade their flock, the Lovells started buying bred ewes at the Keystone International Livestock Exhibition and through other sales.

Annette started showing Suffolks, but after her sister Laura started showing, the family decided to start a flock of Hampshires so the two girls wouldn't have to compete in the show ring.

The projects kept getting more and more involved as more family members joined in the fun.

"The first year we went (Annette) just took her one market lamb. And you're down there the whole week with one lamb. So then she got a Polled Hereford heifer, so then we had two animals at the fair the next year. And then we were like, well we might as well take some more . . . and then of course Laura got into it and it's snowballed," said Marian.

The highest number of animals they've shown at the fair in one year was over 30 including the breeding and market ewes, market hogs, and steers and other beef animals.

When Angela was old enough to begin showing lambs, she chose Dorsets so again the three would not have to compete. As Annette grew past the 4-H age, Angela took over her flock of Suffolks and slowly moved away from the Dorsets.

Melana's choice was easy. She wanted to show the Hampshires, and since Laura's 4-H career was over, she took over Laura's projects.

At age 12, Melana has many years of 4-H showmanship ahead of her in their Bottle Run 4-H Club. But the end of her 4-H years won't be the end of the Lovell's involvement in the market and breeding projects.

"We've figured out that Melana's last year will be Andrew's first year," said Marian, with a laugh. "But his mom says the sheep have to stay here!"

Showing the animals was not all fun and games, however. Each girl had definite ideas of how to improve their sheep flocks or beef herds or market hogs.

"They try hard, and they work hard at it," said Marian. "I can remember going home at the end of a fair and already they're thinking, well next year, we're going to do this. They're already planning the week they leave the year before!"

They also try to pick out the best animals.

"It's getting harder and harder to pick out a good animal. You have to go farther and farther to get one," said Marian.

Searching for good breeding stock has led them to Ohio and even Maine.

Angela's reserve champion breeding Dorset came from Springfield, Maine, said Annette. "I guess that's the farthest anything's ever come."

"We keep trying to get better rams," said Marian.

Annette said, "We like to show our own sheep especially for our own fair. We sell some to other counties too. We've had champions at Tioga, Clinton, and Bloomsburg fairs. These are animals that we've sold to other 4-H 'ers."

The family not only has enjoyed many successes in the show ring, but they've also reached out through their involvement in 4-H to help others get started.

"This year we expect to have about 30 kids (in our club). Lots of kids work hard. There are some who are into the breeding program, too. If you don't have a strong breeding program, you won't have a good market program. Having parent support is real important. 4-H is a family thing. You only get out of it what you put in," said Marian.

In addition to the daily chores of feeding and cleaning up after their sheep, the girls are learning more and more about fitting with every year that goes by.

"We're slick shearing the market lambs now, so it's not so much work. But with the breeding sheep, there's a lot of carding and hand shearing. You can do them half a dozen times if you have time," said Marian.

Because many of the veterinarians in the area are not familiar with sheep, the Lovells have learned to do most of their veterinary work themselves.

"We learned to do a lot of our own work. We do the vaccinating, foot trimming, shearing . . . . If there's a difficult birth, we do it. Whatever needs done, we do it," said Marian, "except we can't do C-sections."

The Lovell's facilities are not fancy, but they adequately protect their sheep from the wind and sometimes frigid temperatures that come with spring lambing.

"At birth we give them lamb starter with vitamins, they get an ear tag and we iodine their navels and make sure they get colostrum," said Marian.

This year the weather has helped a great deal because it has been so mild.

Angela is quick to point out, however that regardless of the work to be done, one of the goals is always to have fun.

As time has passed, each has sister carved out her own niche in the operation and they've continued their involvement in agriculture.

HOMESTEAD NOTES

Love Of Agriculture

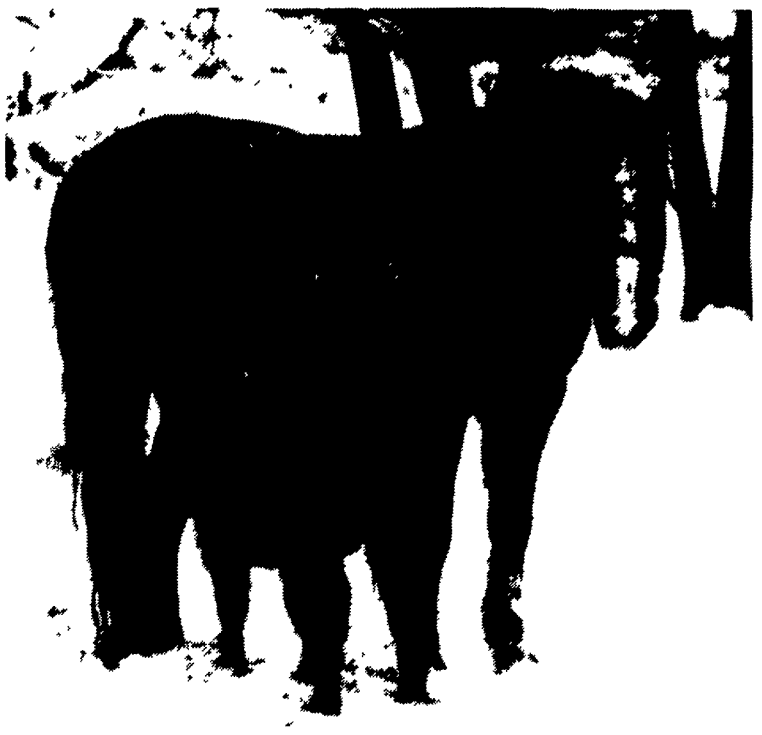
After earning an agriculture degree from Penn State, Annette now works on a Dorset farm in Paoli, Chester County, where she manages some of the 180 sheep on their 35-acre farm. She also judges sheep shows throughout the area.

"When I left here, I went right to Penn State and then I moved in the sheep barns. And then from there, I came back home and milked cows until Dr. Herr told me about a guy that wanted a shepherd. So I went down there and I've been there two years in April. I guess there wasn't too much question, sheep's something that I know," said Angela.



Does this horse think she's a cow or does this calf think he's a colt? Whatever the case, both animals seem to benefit from this arrangement. Yes, the horse is in milk, say the Lovells, even though she has never been bred.

Laura married Ernie Keiss, a dairy farmer from nearby Jersey Shore and is often in the barn milking the family's Ayrshires and Holsteins. She learned how to milk cows when she worked on a nearby dairy farm while in high school.

"I'm more of a beef and dairy person," said Laura. I like sheep, but I like the others better."

Angela works part-time on a large dairy farm and serves as the Lycoming County dairy princess in addition to her chores at home and classes at the Pennsylvania College of Technology in Williamsport.

"I kind of grew up with (agriculture). I have pictures of me in a baby carriage at the fair," said Angela. "I've worked on two dairy farms. I go to work at 3:30 every morning and then I come home and do my chores and go to school. On Tuesdays and Thursdays I don't have school, so that's when I do my dairy promotions."

Melana keeps busy helping with the family's flock of sheep and herd of cows and collecting Dalmatians. Her plans for the future include being a missionary doctor and a veterinarian.

Annette, Angela, and Melana also take karate lessons and the entire family is active in the Fairlawn Christian Missionary Alliance Church.

With each family member's feet firmly rooted in agriculture, anyone can bet that they will carry on the tradition for many years to come.

"(The farm's) a good place to raise a family," said Ralph. "You know where your kids are."

"And I love being out in the country," said Angela.

Spend Less On Car Repairs

RUTGERS (Hunterdon Co., N.J.) — Would you like to protect yourself and save money when it comes to automobile repairs? You will want to be on the alert for common repair scams:

• Watch out for special "deals" that chain stores advertise like a $19.95 oil change or $39.95 muffler job. The trick to look for is the adding of extra charges like, "disposal fees" for getting rid of your used oil or parts. Frequently the mechanics assigned to work on your car will also find other work that needs to be done. The $19.95 oil change can suddenly cost $40 to $50 after the mechanic adds an air filter and new windshield wiper blades.

• Beware of "low-ball" estimates. Follow the "rule of three" and get three estimates on major jobs like transmission work. If two repair shops give you a quote at $1,000 and the third will do the work for $495, watch out! Low-balling is one of the oldest tricks in the book. Once you agree to a low price and a mechanic dismantles your transmission into numerous pieces, it's hard to protest. He can then come back and say that the job will cost $1,400 after all.

• Ask to see the old parts removed from your car and the box from the new parts. This will help prevent you from being charged for parts that were never replaced, having used parts put in instead or having poor-quality parts installed.

It is important to remember that most mechanics and auto dealers are not out to rip consumers off. But even if you feel you have a trusted mechanic, there are ways you can cut your bills.

• Take your car to a mechanic who charges you for the time a repair actually takes rather than using the "flat rate manual" — an industry guide as to how long certain repairs should take.

• Compare prices at dealers verses independent repair shops. Car dealers usually cost more because they charge a premium for labor. A dealer may be better for major work, but for routine maintenance and repairs like new brake pads or a muffler, an independent shop or a chain store usually will be less.

• Make sure you get warranty work done for free. There are many hidden warranties in effect. When manufacturers realize a certain care has a defect that's not covered by the regular warranty, they send out a technical service bulletin that tells dealers the manufacturer will pay to fix the problem. There's no law that says the dealer has to tell you. The bottom line is: ask your dealer point blank if there has been a technical service bulletin, a "goodwill program" or a "policy adjustment" on the problem you're having.

Spending less on car repairs and eliminating unnecessary repairs will keep more money in your pocket and is another way for you to increase your net worth.

Pies Still Make The Best Desserts

It seems that everytime we get together with friends, family, or co-workers, and each one contributes a covered dish, there are always new foods or familiar foods served in different ways for us to try. And this is particularly true of desserts. Someone always has a new, good one.

But in many households, when a truly special dessert is needed, one that will undoubtedly impress the diners and light-up their eyes, pies are probably still a cook's first choice.

And what is so wonderful about pies is that a good, homemade one is not available just anywhere. In a time when so many people want to make at home some of the goodies that they eat in restaurants, nothing can beat the pie that was made from scratch in someone's kitchen.

You have the power to make dessert special this weekend. Bake a pie!

Although many unusual pie combinations are constantly being devised, traditional favorites maintain popularity.

PEANUT BUTTER MERINGUE PIE

Filling:
¾ cup powdered sugar
½ cup creamy peanut butter
½ cup white sugar
3 tablespoons cornstarch
1 tablespoon flour
¼ teaspoon salt

To prepare peanut butter filling, mix together powdered sugar and peanut butter to make coarse crumbs. Set aside. In saucepan mix together white sugar, cornstarch, flour and salt. Add egg yolks and milk, stirring with whisk until well-combined. Heat to boiling over medium heat. Cook for 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and stir in butter and vanilla. Sprinkle ⅓ of peanut butter mixture over bottom of pie shell. Spoon half of pudding over crumbs. Sprinkle with another ⅓ of crumbs and top with remaining pudding.

Angela Lovell wears a lot of hats so to speak. She is the Lycoming County Dairy Princess, shows champion Suffolks sheep, is a freshman at Pennsylvania College of Technology in Williamsport, and works on two dairy farms in addition to the family's Maple Spring Farm in Linden.

To read more about Angela, her three sisters, and parents Ralph and Marian Lovell, turn to the Homestead Notes page in this section.

VANILLA CREAM PIE WITH BUTTER CRUST

9-inch Peanut Butter Crust:
1½ cups graham cracker crumbs
3 tablespoons sugar
¼ cup butter
¼ cup peanut butter

Crust:

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Melt together and add to crumb mixture. If desired, save ¼ cup mixture for topping. Press remaining mixture firmly and evenly against bottom and sides of pie pan. Bake 10 minutes. Cool; fill with vanilla cream.

Vanilla Cream:
⅔ cup sugar
3 tablespoons cornstarch
½ teaspoon salt
3 cups milk
3 egg yolks, slightly beaten
1 tablepoon butter
1½ teaspoon vanilla

Mix sugar, cornstarch, and salt in saucepan. Gradually stir in milk. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and boils. Boil 1 minute. Remove from heat. Gradually stir at least half of hot mixture into egg yolks. Blend into hot mixture in saucepan. Boil one minute more, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Blend in butter and vanilla. Pour immediately into baked pie shell. Finish with either pie meringue or after cooled to room temperature top with sweetened whipped cream.

So, there I was, planning to compose glorious praises about the signs of spring.

Then morning dawned. And with it a residue of overnight snowfall, dissolving under sheets of icy, cold rain that had us all soaked and thoroughly chilled before we were nearly finished barn chores.

Appropriate, huh?

That unpredictability is so typical of the coming of this most welcome season of the year (unless your business is ski resorts or custom snowplowing). In fact, by the time this reaches print (more than a week from writing), unpredictable spring will probably have done a half-dozen more about-faces, weatherwise.

Unpredictable though the season may be, Mother Nature never fails to come through with predictable dependability about some things. In fact, some of them showed up earlier than usual.

The first crocus poked their heads above ground weeks ago, sending tiny, golden yellow blooms out of the ground to play hide-n-seek with the occasional bouts of snowflurries. Daffodil buds have hugged the stalks for more than a month, though the first cup-like bloom sprung open just last week.

Daylilies and iris have pushed foliage up through the dead stalks and leaves left from last season. Forsythia bushes have buds waiting at the starting line, ready to burst open when the warm-up gun sounds.

Our hatching-time-resident Canada geese sailed onto the lower pond way back in early February, arriving during a cold stretch when most of the water's surface was frozen. Five of them returned, parents with a trio of full-grown offspring, to splash about the underground-spring-fed corner of the pond, which never freezes.

We knew they were returnees from a previous year when they promptly relocated to the edge of the smaller pond and settled there to bask in the sunshine. That spot, the lower edge of the lawn and a mere stone's throw from the dairy barn, is blessed with a southern exposure. Large, low limbs of an old weeping willow offer further shelter and help push the earliest green grass around the farmstead.

But after a couple of weeks of goose family harmony, the usual empty-the-nest hormones kicked in. For the next several days, we endured the pathetic honking of kids being thrown out of the household. They took refuge in one of the alfalfa fields up on the hill, hunkering down together and noisily pleading to Mom and Pop Goose for a family reunion.

Ultimately, bowing to the will of nature, the kids took wing and flew off to find their own adventures. But, periodically, a small flock of geese will set down in the alfalfa field, generating anew a honking racket between the resident pair and the visitors.

Is it the kids, returning just to chat? Or have they joined tranks with a peer group of other outcasts, returning home, as kids of that age are prone to do, to question everything their parents ever taught them?

Whatever the reason, the visitors' stay is always brief. If they hang too close for too long, Pop Goose goes on the rampage, dive-bombing them while honking what sounds like strings of four-letter goose bad words. We've never been able to understand why some ponds in the area have a couple of geese living together happily, while our pair is so territorial that no other feathered neighbors — even ducks — are tolerated.

Though they run off all others of their kind, this returning pair of geese has no such hangups about people and are suprisingly tame. On one recent sunny morning, they nibbled their way up from the pond, grazing across the lawn, finally halting at the edge of the basement porch. That was a first.

And, preferably, a last.

While we love our Canada geese residents, we prefer them at the pond — not as "porch pets."

Consuming Thoughts

During Lenten season, you'll find supermarkets featuring a variety of seafood specials. Finfish and shellfish are quick, easy and safe to prepare if you follow a few simple guidelines. Almost any cooking method is appropriate, but because there are so many different products and cooking methods available, many people still lack confidence in their ability to cook seafood.

It's truly a "fast food" when it comes to preparation. Unlike meat, seafood doesn't need to be tenderized by cooking, and cooking time for most products is from 10 to 20 minutes.

The simplest way to cook fresh (unfrozen) fish fillets and steaks is to use the "10-minute rule," which suggests you cook fish for 10 minutes per inch of thickness at 425-450 degrees Fahrenheit (F). Measure the thickest portion of the product to be cooked, and adjust the cooking time accordingly. For example, if the thickest part of a fillet is about one-half inch, cook it for five minutes.

Since most fillets are thinner at one end, fold the thinner part under the rest of the fillet. The fillet then has a more even thickenss, ensuring uniform cooking. As you approach the time specified by the 10-minute rule, check the product to be sure you aren't overcooking. Seafood loses its natural translucent appearance, turns opague, and flakes easily to the touch of a fork when done.

The 10-minue rule works especially well for baking or broiling. When broiling, keep the fish three to four inches from the heat source; thicker pieces, five to six inches away. When baking, always preheat the oven first so that you can estimate the cooking time more accurately.

You can adapt the 10-minute rule to poaching, boiling and steaming seafood —just begin the timing after the water returns to a boil. The rule cannot be applied to deep frying and microwaving, which cook fish faster. If you're cooking fish in foil, in sauce, with vegetables or other added ingredients, add about five minutes to the cooking time specified by the 10-minute rule.

Understand that this rule for cooking seafood is a simple guideline that you can adjust to your personal taste. Using the rule, your product should reach a temperature between 145-160 degrees F. Check the fillet or steak with a food thermometer if safety is a concern.

You can cook shellfish by poaching, steaming, boiling, sauteing, stir-frying, deep frying, baking, broiling or grilling. Because most shellfish are smaller and more delicate than finfish and usually cook faster, the 10 minute rule isn't appropriate.

For live clams, oysters and mussels, current Food and Drug Administration recommendations suggest boiling for three to five minutes after the shells have opened, or steaming for four to nine minutes. Boil shucked meats for three minutes, or bake for 10 minutes at 450 degrees F, or fry them in oil for 10 minutes at 375 degrees F.

Scallps and shrimp cook rapidly; how much time it will take depends on the size, product form, cooking method and the amount being cooked. As a rule poaching, steaming and sauteing take slightly less time than baking and broiling.

Seafood, naturally low in fat, can make a positive contribution to a healthy diet. To evaluate the healthfulness of a seafood recipe, check to see if the recipe:

- suggests cooking with oil or other fats;
- calls for a sauce that contains ingredients high in fat, such as cream, butter, mayonnaise or cheese; or
- calls for the addition of salt or seasonings high in salt.

If the recipe requires any of the above, consider modifying it by identifying the high-fat and high-sodium ingredients and substituting lower-fat and lower-sodium alternatives.

4-H Youth Gets Taste Of Culinary Career

NEWARK, Del. — Nick Argo began a promising career in food preparation as a young child in his grandmother's kitchen.

"My grandmother used to look after me when my mom was working," he recalls, "and she let me help with the cooking."

Seventeen-year-old Argo has learned a lot about preparing food since the days of licking Grandma's spoon. The Milford native is well on his way to achieving his goal of becoming a chef and restaurateur. Last August, he attended the 1996 National 4-H Food and Nutrition Career Exploration Program in Chevy Chase, Md., where he joined 36 other youths from across the nation to get a taste of careers in the culinary arts. Part of the National 4-H Council Workforce Preparation Program, the event was sponsored by food industry giants including Tyson Foods and Fleischmann's Yeast.

At the week-long program, the Milford resident worked alongside chefs, discussed food issues with government and business representatives, learned about food distribution, visited culinary arts colleges and Pentagon restaurants and toured the cities of Washington and Baltimore.

"I learned a lot and had a great time," says Argo.

He particularly enjoyed the cooking classes, where he learned how to prepare elegant fruit tortes and cheese puffs. One of the highlights was a bread-baking seminary, in which the students were charged with creating their own bread and marketing pitch to go with it. His group came up with a cranberry oatmeal bread that won the prize.

It's not surprising that Argo could whip up a bread from scratch. As an 8-year-old, he prepared a pumpkin roll completely on his own for the 4-H Favorite Foods Contest. A member of the Houston Cardinals 4-H Club for nine years, he has taught food preparation at day camps and has won ribbons for his pumpkin roll, cinnamon buns and salami pepper loaf. At home he likes preparing Chinese food and baking bread. He estimates he has spent more than 6,000 hours in food preparation.

"For the past four or five years, he's been able to do anything he wants in the kitchen," says his mothers, Carol Argo. "He's way out of my league."

When not in the kitchen, Argo helps on his grandfather's farm. He has participated in sheep and beef 4-H projects, and has shown cattle at the Delaware State Fair. After graduation, he hopes to work for a large hotel and eventually start his own restaurant.

The food and nutrition workshop Argo took part in last summer is only one of a variety of programs offered through the National 4-H Workforce Preparation initiative. All are based on the Secretary of Labor's Commission on Achieveing Necessary Skills (SCANS) competencies and foundation skills, which include working in teams, using resources and understanding technology.

"In all our programs we emphasize the skills that young adults will need to succeed in today's work environment," says Sheila Chaconas, project director for workforce preparation at National 4-H Council. "We're helping children of all ages to think about careers and develop workforce readiness."

Applications are now being accepted for the 1997 National Food and Nutrition Career Exploration Program. Contact your local Cooperative Extension office for additional information. In Kent County, call 697-4000; in Sussex County, 856-7303; and in New Castle County, 831-2667.

Aspiring chef and restaurateur Nick Argo cooks a special dinner at home after taking part in a food and nutrition career exploration program at National 4-H Council.

Why is carbon monoxide dangerous?
Because when you breathe the gas, it can make you really sick
First, some chemistry cues Carbon monoxide is a poisonous gas made when one carbon molecule attaches to one oxygen molecule
Carbon monoxide is a byproduct of burning fuels with carbon For example, cars, some furnaces and fireplaces use carbon-containing gasoline, natural gas and wood
Normally, carbon monoxide binds with oxygen in the air and makes carbon dioxide (That's why it's not a big deal outside) But if your furnace or fireplace isn't working right, or if the car is left on inside the garage, carbon monoxide builds up because there's not enough oxygen to neutralize it in the enclosed area
So here's the problem Your body needs oxygen to work right Hemoglobin, a special part of your blood, picks up the oxygen in your lungs and carries it all over your body But when there's carbon monoxide in the air, your hemoglobin is 200 times more likely to latch onto it instead of the oxygen Once hemoglobin bonds to carbon monoxide, it can't carry oxygen
People don't realize they're breathing carbon monoxide gas because the symptoms are the same as the flu — headaches, weakness, nausea and fainting — and because they can't taste, smell or see the gas People sometimes go into comas and even die from severe cases of poisoning
To prevent carbon monoxide poisoning, ask your parents to get a carbon monoxide detector from a local hardware or department store — and if it goes off, open the windows to get fresh air, leave the house and get help!
Scientifically yours,

How To Raise A Nature-Loving Child

(NAPS) — "Why do animals go extinct?" "Can polluted water be cleaned?" "Why do salmon return to where they were hatched?"

These are but a few of the questions children have asked Ranger Rick, one of the country's most popular children's magazines.

This year the magazine celebrates 30 years of opening young people's eyes to the wonders of nature and the world around them.

What's the secret to their success? "Mix a child's natural curiosity with the amazing variety of wildlife and wild places around them, throw in some fun and facts, and before you know it you've got a child who's wild about nature," says Editor Gerry Bishop.

Along with the adventures of Ranger Rick, a charming, inquisitive raccoon, and his friends (Scarlett Fox, Boomer Badger, Punky Porcupine, etc.), the magazine uses colorful nature photos and stories to grab and hold a child's interest.

Published by the National Wildlife Federation, Ranger Rick has received countless letters from former readers who say they were inspired and entertained by the magazine, often to the point of shaping career choices.

Fairfield University herpetologist Gregory Watkins-Colwell was one such child. "Ranger Rick is probably why I became a biologist," he writes. "In fact, I first read the word herpetologist in Ranger Rick. I was 8 at the time. I've been a herpetologist ever since."

Terry Dukerschein was already grown when reading Ranger Rick to his children got him "hooked up to the environmental side of biology." Today he's doing long-term environmental monitoring projects on the Mississippi River.

What would it take to make a nature lover out of your child? Try these tips:

- Turn off the TV
- Take your child on a nature walk
- Put up a birdfeeder
- Go camping
- Plant a backyard wildlife habitat
- Encourage wonder
- Go fishing
- Go on a bug hunt
- Get to know your local nature center
- Read Ranger Rick together.

A subscription is only $15 and can be ordered by calling 1-800-588-1650.

Eggceptional Egg Hunt

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — On Sunday, March 23, Hands-on-House, Children's Museum of Lancaster will hold their annual Eggceptional Egg Hunt.

This museum event is a perennial Palm Sunday favorite. Families are invited to visit the museum during the hours of 11 a.m.-5 p.m. to learn about the variety of animals that come from eggs.

This year will feature papa pandemonium as we pay special attention to animal fathers. Did you know that frogs make fabulous fathers? Play catch with a father seahorse and do the twist with a father toad. Learn why a father frog gives piggy back rides. Explor the land down under for a mammal that lays eggs. Swim with the fishes as we go hunting for shark eggs.

Children will search and collect colored eggs, as well as search for clues about different kinds of animals eggs. This year's egg hunt will have children searching for shark eggs, dinosaur eggs, swan eggs, geese eggs, slug eggs, platypus eggs, spider eggs, turtle eggs, birds nests, frog eggs, butterfly eggs and more.

The majority of the activites are inside and all Eggceptional Egg Hunt activities will occur rain or shine. All activities are included with regular museum admission of $4 each for adults and regular $4 admission plus $1 "eggstra" per child to participate. The museum's usual two floors of exhibit fun will be open for exploring during the Eggceptional Egg Hunt. The optional egg hunts will run continuously and participants may arrive anytime between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Families should plan to spend one to one and one-half hours at the museum for this special event.

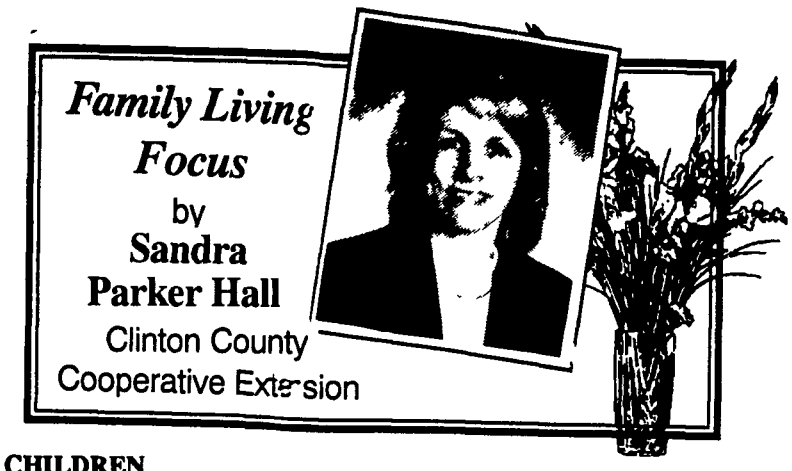
FARM TIRES

THE LEADER IN THE FIELD



KEEPING CHILDREN SAFE

Everyday we hear or read articles that children are injured or killed. Injuries are the leading cause of death in children under age 15. Injuries happen often and can be prevented. Accidents happen on farms, in communities, as well as in the cities.

The key to preventing injuries is supervision. A child can be hurt in a few minutes. Adults need to help children learn about the dangers around the home.

If you live on a farm, Dennis J. Murphy, professor in College of Agricultural Sciences at Penn State, offers the following safety suggestions:

•Barns are not playhouses. Children have died playing with hay and grain drop openings, baling twine, and ropes hanging from the rafters.

•Tractors and farm machinery are not toys. Keep children from playing on, in, or under farm equipment. Tractor tires and lumber have crushed children to death when equipment slipped or fell.

•Toddlers put everything in their mouths, including caustic cleaning chemicals, pesticide-contaminated dirt, gas and oil soaked rags, medicated animal feeds, etc.

•Do not allow small children in the same pen with farm animals. Animals can attack for no apparent reason. Animals can get frightened or confused and trample a child. In almost all cases of animal tramplings, the owner considered the animal "tame" or "gentle."

•Toddlers and small children can drown within seconds if they fall into large animal water tanks or other containers holding liquid. Soft and uneven edges of ponds and streams may result in a fall into the water.

•Barnyards are often home to broken glass shards, pieces of wire, nails, chemically contaminated soil, tools and other hazards.

•Keep children away from moving vehicles. Children have been run over by milk trucks, farm trucks, and tractors.

Young children need constant supervision. They are invincible and are not aware of the many hazards they are exposed to. By creating a safe environment you take away potential dangers and help children grow in a safe environment.

Now, let's move to the house. Please take the following "How Safe Is Your Home" quiz and see how you do.

Horticulture Blooms Lifetime Interest

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

LOGANVILLE (York Co.) — Though she grew up helping to clear orchard brush and pack apples, Patti Levis never dreamed she would make a career in the horticulture industry.

Patti Goodling Levis is the daughter of the late orchardist and Congressman George Goodling, who served the 19th Congressional District for several terms. During an interim in his Washington service, he took on the responsibility of the executive secretary position overseeing the Pennsylvania State Horticultural Association (PSHA).

When re-elected to a second round at the congressional seat in the late 1950s, Goodling retained the executive secretary title and continued to edit the PSHA's monthly newsletter, "Fruit News." But it was Patti who picked up the myriad of details involved in the job, from maintaining membership files to organizing the annual convention and trade show. In 1982, after her father's death, Patti was officially named the executive secretary. During the tenure of the father-daughter leadership, PSHA's working office remained the modest one in the basement of the Goodling family home.

"My father would come down here on Sunday afternoons to work on the "Fruit News." The phones didn't ring all the time here," smiles Patti Levis from her office chair, surrounded by photos and memorabilia of his congressional career. Today, her youngest brother, William "Bill" Goodling, follows in his dad's footsteps representing the 19th Congressional District in Washington.

"This was to be a part-time job but it's almost a full-time one," she explains. "I've spent many hours down here. But is was nice to work here, because I didn't have to dress up to go to the office."

Now, at 78, Patti Levis has stepped down as the PSHA's executive secretary. Named the new PSHA executive secretary is Maureen Ivin, a grower from Ortanna, Adams County. Handling the "Fruit News" editorship is Rob Crassweller, Penn State.

With more than 600 members across Pennsylvania, the Horticultural Association represents primarily fruit growers. As a trade organization, the PSHA keeps its members informed of changes in the industry, monitors related legislative and regulatory issues and organizes educational meetings and events. A major activity of the association is the raising of tens of thousands of dollars annually to help support horticultural research, primarily through Penn State. A large portion of those funds is generated through the association's food booth at the Farm Show, selling fruit products like apple cider and 23,000 apple dumpings consumed by the 1997 crowd of attendees.

Though the Goodling family had lived in Loganville for much of her childhood, Patti was 16 when they moved to the orchard site at the south end of the small town. Her great grandmother, Robert Goodling, was a grocer and originally started the 40-acre orchard that the family grew up helping to tend.

Patti Levis was honored by the Pennsylvania State Horticultural Association and the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association during the groups' joint annual meeting in February.

"We has to work while we were growing up," she relates. "And, when we had any extra land available, we planted vegetables. We used to stick thousands of onions in the spring. When they pruned the orchards, we helped pile the brush on pieces of wire that were pulled through the orchards with a tractor, so the piles could be hauled away for disposal."

After graduation from York High School, Patti got her nursing degree at York Hospital. She joined the Army in 1942, and after six months, was sent overseas with the 30th General Hospital Unit. Army nursing took her to England and Wales, then close to the front lines in France after the D-Day invasion, helping care for the troops in field hospital tents.

Returning home after her tour of duty, Patti studied at business school, and served two years as a corporate nurse for New York Wire Cloth. She married Tom Levis, a career military engineer, whom she met overseas during her military nursing tour. Following another military tour overseas, and his subsequent retirement from the military at age 39, the couple and their two children returned to the York area, when Patti "began fiddling with this."

During her more than 30 years of administration work for the state's horticultural growers, Patti has seen some dramatic changes in fruit production, from regulatory issues to equipment technology developments.

"In the early years when we moved here, we ring-faced apples for storage. It was a way of storing apples in round, heavy paper bags. Then the industry moved on to cardboard boxes and now a lot of the fruit is handled in bulk, in large crates, moved with forklift equipment," she relates.

"We used to store our apples at the York Ice and Milk Company, before we built our own storage. They would hold until about March or April," adds Patti. "Now, with controlled-atmosphere storage, you can store apples year-round. But you also have your investment tied up all that time, too."

Along with technology, the trees have also been modernized and changed.

"Orchards take a long time to develop," she reflects, noting that there is no return on investment on the years from planting to production. "A lot of orchards are now going to dwarf trees, which come into production several years sooner than the 8 or 10 years necessary for a standard time to mature. Dwarf trees also cut labor costs, because they are easier to harvest."

Patti feels that horticulture is a more difficult business today than in past years, due to a proliferation of rules and regulations, especially those governing the use of chemicals. Those rules, she notes, "have become unreal" and make orchard production more costly for growers.

"We do have better equipment and a lot of new varieties of apples and peaches," she explains, of Pennsylvania's two largest fruit crops. "But sometimes it takes a while for the public to accept new varieties. The Golden Delicious apple was a hard sell at first, because people thought an apple should be red. People usually like the new varieites, if you can get them to taste them."

Of great concern to Patti Levis has been the declining number of horticulturates in the industry, statistics she monitored as PSHA's executive secretary.

"Year after year, we have lost numbers," she laments, adding a hopeful note: "Now some younger people are starting to come into the business."

In 1996, Patti was honored by the PSHA as its Grower of the Year. She was again honored on her official retirement at the group's February annual meeting at Hershey, the final meeting for which she had organizational responsibility. She has traditionally handled all details, from meals and room reservations to coordinating a popular industry trade show with 170 exhibitor booths. Patti also received special recognition from the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers, which holds its annual meeting in conjunction with the PSHA.

After condensing and turning over the PSHA's records, Patti Levis plans to spend a little more time on the golf courses of the area. As a retirement thank-you, the PSDA gifted her with a golfing vacation at the Boar's Head Inn, Charlottesville, Virginia.

Patti and Tom are also looking forward to more free time to share with their four grandchildren, ranging in age from 19 to one-year-old.

You Ask, You Answer

ANSWER—A Danville reader wanted a simple recipe for homemade soap. Sarah Algoe of Mount Joy supplied this one: in a large porcelain or stainless steel canner, combine 1 qt. cold water and 1 can Red Devil lye. To this add 1/2 cup Borax, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1/2 teaspoon salt, and 1/4 cup ammonia. Step 3: Melt 5 lbs. fat and let cool to same temperature as lye mixture. Pour into 5 gal. bucket. Add lye mixture and mix with old broom handle. Essential oil may be added at this point for fragrance. Step 4: Stir until it cools enough and traces (starts to set-up). Pour into wax paper lined boxes glass dishes or plastic dishes (not metal). Cool 24 hours and after the first 8 hours cut with knife into desired size bars. DO NOT TOUCH WITH HANDS/HANDLE WITH GLOVES. After 24 hours remove from pans with gloves. Let open to air for 6 weeks to cure. Sarah says this recipe works well but if made in the summer it may take longer to trace, but you can always set your container in cool water and it will trace more quickly. Adding the oils, too, will make it more user friendly.

ANSWER — Marie Mulford wanted the name and address of a person who crochets old-fashioned, but not braided, rugs. Deb Kirkland, 1937 Baltimore Pike, East Berlin, PA, phone 717-292-2950, crochets rugs and says they look old-fashioned. Mrs. Isaac Burkholder, 630 Topton Road, Kutztown, PA 19530, phone 610-683-5204, also crochets rugs and has some on hand.
Another reader suggests trying a Mennonite-owned shop at Route 54 and Bowman Road, near Elysburg.

ANSWER — Two responses to H. Donald Brior of Rock Glen, who was looking for a sauerkraut stomper. One was from T. C. Wills, PO Box 248, Frederick, PA 19435, phone 610-754-7541, fax 610-754-6716, who makes them and has one in stock. Dimensions are as follows: 16" long, 1¼ " diameter handle, 6" stomper, 4" diameter. It's hard maple and costs $25.

ANSWER—Joe Jedju of Pembertown, N.J., was looking for a butcher who slaughters, dresses, and packages chicken and goats for personal use. A reader supplied this source: Bringhurst Meats, 38 W. Taunton Road, Berlin, NJ, phone 609-767-0110.

ANSWER — Charlene Bennett was looking for an old-fashioned potato ricer. Louise Graybeal says that one can be ordered from Lehman's Non-electric Catalog, 1 Lehman Circle, PO Box 321, Kidron, Ohio 44636.

ANSWER — Mrs. Bennie Stoltzfus of Quarryville was looking for used zig zag scissors that cut designs. Wayne Grube of Barnesville doesn't have a source for used ones but says that they can be purcased from Paper Direct, 100 Plaza Drive, Secaucus, N.J. 07094-3606 or by calling 1-800-272-7377 for a catalog.

ANSWER — A Danville reader was looking for a source of bulk foods. Rebecca King of Quarryville suggests E & S. Sales, 1235 North Street RD5, Shipshewana, Indiana 46565.

ANSWER — Robert Lusnia of Toms River, N.J., and others were looking for candle molds and other supplies. M. Bishop suggests Craft King, PO Box 90637, Lakeland, FL 33804, orders only 800-769-9494 or fax 813-648-2972. Bishop also suggests J. W. Jung Seed Co., 335 High St., Randolph, WI 53957-0001 as a source for gourd seeds. Another reader gave Gurney's Seed and Nursery Co., 110 Capital Street, Yankton, South Dakota, 57079.

ANSWER—Another answer to Marie Mulford's question about old-fashioned crocheted rugs. A Zion Grove reader suggests contacting John Mumaw, RR1 Box 1018, Sugar Loaf, PA 18249.

Cook's Question

ANSWER — A faithful reader is looking for a recipe for Tiramisu, which is a creamy Italian custard layered over lady fingers, soaked in espresso. It is served in Olive Garden restaurants. We received a couple of recipes. The following was supplied by a reader who says it is from a Disney World cookbook. The second recipe is from Sarah Clark of Everett.

TIRAMISU

2 cups mascarpone cheese
3 cups heavy cream
¼ cup powdered sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
3 tablespoons coffee flavoring
1 teaspoon instant coffee
10" sponge cake
¼ cup cocoa powder

Combine cheese, cream, sugar, vanilla, coffee flavoring and instant coffee in a mixing bowl and whip until stiff. Split sponge cake in half, making a top and bottom layer. Spread cream mixture on bottom later and place top half of cake over cream. Refrigerate for 1 hour before serving. Just before serving, dust the top of the cake with cocoa powder.

TIRAMISU

8 ounces cream cheese, room temperature, cut into pieces
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons milk
1½ teaspoons vanilla
1¾ cups heavy cream chilled
1¼ cups espresso
7 oz. package ladyfingers
¼ cup cocoa powder

Beat cream cheese, sugar, and milk until the mixture is smooth and fluffy. Blend in vanilla. Transfer to a medium bowl. Whip heavy cream until stiff and fold into the cream cheese mixture. Cover and refrigerate until well-chilled at least 1 hour. This part can be prepared two days ahead.

Pour coffee into a large shallow dish. Dip ladyfingers in the coffee, turning to coat on all sides. Do not saturate. Arrange in a 9½ X 2½ inch serving dish. Pour in the cream cheese mixture and smooth the top. Using a sieve, dust the top with cocoa powder. Refrigerate until serving time. Serves 6-8.

ANSWER — Pat Elligson, Millers, Md., wanted a recipe for a cabbage slaw that is cooked and combined with a yellow cooked dressing that is very creamy. She thinks her mother used a Pa. Dutch recipe to make it. Sarah Clark of Everett sends this one to try:

DUTCH SLAW

¾ lb. bacon chopped
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon dry mustard
½ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
2 cups finely shredded cabbage
¼ cup chopped green pepper
1 medium onion chopped
1 teaspoon parsley

Cook bacon in skillet until light golden brown. Remove from heat and add lemon juice, salt and mustard. Mix in salad dressing or mayonnaise. Steam cabbage in separate pan until almost wilted. Then drain. Add to dressing and mix. Reduce heat and simmer for 2 minutes. Serve immediately.

ANSWER — What ratio of cinnamon and sugar is good for sand tarts? Charlene Bennett said that hers always come out too light or too dark. Louise Graybeal's recipe calls for 1½ cups sugar to 1 teaspoon cinnamon.

ANSWER — J. Rehmeyer, York, was looking for a pizza bread recipe that tastes similar to that sold at the York market. Janice Gee of Horseheads, N.Y., supplies this recipe made with a bread machine. She hopes there's a similarity.

PIZZA BREAD

1½ cups pizza sauce
2/3 cup grated mozzarella cheese
3 tablespoons oil oil
2/3 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon oregano
2 cups whole wheat flour
2 cups bread flour
2 teaspoons yeast

At second beep add 2/3 cup diced pepperoni, 2/3 cup diced mushrooms and 1/4 cup dried tomatoes. This recipe makes a large loaf but can be halved for a smaller one.

4-H

4-H Potato Contest

Along with the many county residents that had entries at this year's Farm Show in Harrisburg was a group of six 4-H'ers competing in the annual 4-H Potato Judging Contest.

This event is cosponsored by the Pennsylvania Farm Show and the Pennsylvania Potato Growers Cooperative.

The youth have been practicing weekly since mid-July at the Styer Farm Market in Muncy. Coached by three generations of the Styer family, they continued to demonstrate their judging prowess at this year's event.

The group for 1997 consisted of an "A" team which placed sixth in the state and two individuals:

•Individuals — Julie Stugart, daughter of Rueben and Joyce Stugart, Cogan Station; and Grace Delany, daughter of Stephan and Betty Delany, Muncy.

Landscaping For Birds

Spring is here. Learn how to landscape your yard for wildlife. York County Cooperative Extension is sponsoring a landscaping for wildlife and control program on Monday, March 24 at 6:30 p.m.

Great and small gardeners may want to create an oasis for birds in their community. Ask yourself how much open space do we have, how many and what kinds of trees are present, and how are the trees and other plants arranged?

Only a handful of bird species find a home in urban areas. These include pigeons, house sparrows, starlings, and house finches. As the amount of open space and natural vegetations increases, so does the diversity of birds. Cardinals, mourning doves, blue jays, and robins are common in communities that have some open space and trees. If small patches of woods are available, you can add chickadees, nuthatches, and some woodpeckers. Migrating warblers may use these areas for feeding and resting on their journey south in fall or on the return in spring.

Birds require food, water, cover, and space for survival. Collectively these items are termed habitat. Within an urban or suburban community, the major way we influence habitat quality is through the kinds of trees and shrubs we plant or retain.

When selecting trees and shrubs to plant in urban areas, select ones that will provide food for birds on a year-round basis. Many birds eat soft mast (fruit), sot one of the best ways to provide food for wildlife is to select berry-producers such as serviceberry, mountain ash, and hawthorn. In addition to providing food for birds, these are very attractive landscaping trees. When trees are fruiting, be on the look out for large flocks of cedar waxwings or robins attracted to your trees. Hard mast includes acorns, hickories, beechnuts, and walnuts. Besides providing seeds for birds like blue jays and mammals like squirrels, these species are often large shade trees.

In Pennsylvania, hemlocks and pines provide needed shelter for birds in winter. Clusters of conifers provide protection from the elements in winter and protected nest sites in spring.

Birds like clusters of trees and shrubs rather than individual plants. Plant islands of vegetation, and within the islands plant trees, shrubs, and herbaceous plants of different sizes. To increase the diversity of birds in your areas, maximize the number of layers of vegetation that are present. This means you want to have multiple layers from small shrubs to larger canopy trees planted in close proximity to one another.

Birds use corridors of trees and shrubs to move from one area to another. Connect islands of vegetation with corridors of trees. If wild areas and woodlots are present, use corridors to connect these areas together.

Water is one of the essential requirements for birds. Many birds can obtain much of the water they need from the foods they eat or from dew and rain. However, there is nothing like open water for attracting birds. If you have a stream or waterway within your community, it can be greatly enhanced by protecting or planting a buffer of trees and shrubs along the stream edge. The trees will provide food and cover in close proximity to the water.

Frequently in urban areas, large areas are planted with one or two species of trees and shrubs. These monocultures are used to create designs appealing to the human eye, but they generally do not attact a wide variety of birds. Different birds have different habitat requirements so the best way to attract a variety of birds is to landscape with a variety of trees and shrubs.

Large lawn areas provide habitat for only a few species of birds like starlings, robins, and Canada geese. Consider converting part of the area to a wildlife garden for hummingbirds or convert some of it to islands of trees and shrubs.

Large shade trees such as oaks and elms will provide nest sites for many birds, including robins, blue jays, and orioles. To provide habitat for cavity nesters, build and place nest boxes. Nest boxes in urban areas will primarily attract house sparrows and starlings so they are best if used in less developed areas. Shrubs such as forsythia or raspberry provide nest sites for birds like cardinals. Conifers are used as nest sites by chipping sparrows and mourning doves.

1997 Dairy Of Distinction Farms Sought

Kingston (Luzerne Co.) — Do you take pride in maintaining your dairy farm? Does your dairy farm project an attractive, wholesome image to consumers? If so, the Dairy Of Distinction Program of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania will consider your farm for the program's annual recognition awards.

The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program was first started in 1983 to recognize the hard work and dedication of the farmers who maintain attractive farms. The purpose of the program is to instill a greater sense of confidence in the wholesomeness of dairy products, and increase their sales.

Farms that apply are judged on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds, and surroundings, since this is what our dairy product consumers observe as they drive by. The cleanliness of the barnyard, feed areas and manure management are other aspects of the farm operation taken into consideration. Roadside judging is conducted during the month of May Former winners of past years are also rejudged to ensure they continue to meet the standards of excellence.

To qualify for consideration, you must be actively dairy farming and shipping milk. Applications are available from your state office. Pennsylvania: American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc., 239 Schuyler Ave., Kingston, PA 18704. (717) 283-2204; New York: Carol Weddle, N.Y. Holstein Assn., 957 Mitchell Street, Ithaca N.Y. 14851, (607) 273-7591; or New Jersey: August Knispel, RD 1, Box 325, Pittstown, New Jersey 08867, (201) 735-4989. All applications must be completed and returned by April 15th.

The Dairy of Distinction program is financed in Pennsylvania by Dairy Farmers through the American Dairy Association Dairy Council and Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, plus Agribusiness organizations. The Pennsylvania Dairy Of Distinction Program is conducted with advice and help by Penn State cooperative extension.

Dairy of Distinction
Dairy Farm Beautification Program

HOW IS YOUR FARM SCORED?

Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, Inc.

Awards will be based upon neatness, good maintenance and other factors which can be controlled by the farmer. Attractive background scenery should not be weighed heavily in judging. All judging observations should be made from a vehicle at one or more points on an adjacent public highway (or if farm is off the road, the nearest lane). Judging should give equal consideration to old wood construction and new construction of metal or concrete block.

The award program may be used for subsequent advertising or promotion activities for dairy products or dairy farming. Farmers who apply for awards agree that; if selected they will cooperate with these activities and make all reasonable efforts to maintain both the exterior and interior of their properties in an acceptable condition.

HOW THE APPLICATION WORKS

The owner or operator of the dairy farm should sign the application and send it to NEDFBP secretary by April 15.

HOW THE JUDGING WORKS

Judging teams will visit farms during the month of May. Farms will be judged each year as the award is presented on an annual basis. Any dairy failing to maintain appearance standards will be asked to remove their sign. The Dairy of Distinction signs remain the property of the committee, not the property of the dairy farmer. All farms must achieve a compliance score of 90 percent on their Dairy of Distinction score card. Your cooperative or milk handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality.

RULES FOR THE DAIRY OF DISTINCTION AWARD

1). The Dairy of Distinction sign remains the property of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Committee.
2). The post and bracket shall be supplied by and maintained by the dairy farmer. It is suggested that a wood post 4' x 4' x 12' or iron pipe 2' x 12' be used. Posts or pipe should be installed and maintained in true vertical position with 8' above ground. Top of the bracket shou'd be lower than six inches from the top of the post.
3). Sign shall be displayed in front of the dairy at roadside. An attractive post and bracket, or other frame, shall be used to display the sign. No more than three signs should be displayed from the sign frame or post, and all shall be of a style, general size and quality comparable to the Dairy of Distinction sign. Sign should be secured on all sides to avoid wind damage.
4). Signs shall not be moved to other premises. New owners of a Dairy of Distinction farm must apply to retain the sign.
5). Replacement of damaged signs shall be the discretion of the committee.
6). No producer shall be charged with scoring or sign expense.
7). Judges' decisions will be final.
8). Judging will take place between May 1st and May 31st.
9). Farms awarded a Dairy of Distinction sign in previous years will be judged between April 1st and April 30th If they do not qualify, they will be rejudged between May 1st and May 31st so they have the opportunity to keep the sign.
10) Farms that do not requalify will return the sign to their regional Dairy of Distinction Committee.

ie needs. Women and seniors consuming 1,600-1,800 calories need six servings per day.

Teen girls, children, men and active women using 2,200 calories need nine servings per day. Teen boys and active men using 2,800 calories need 11 servings per day.

One serving equals slice of bread, ½ bagel or English muffin, a regular size muffin, 1 ounce of cereal, ½ cup of cooked cereral or ½ cup of cooked rice or pasta. Most of us eat more than one serving of pasta at a meal, and this is fine. We just need to count it as two or more servings.

Cereals are confusing since the only way you can determine a serving size is to look at the Nutrition Facts Label on each cereal box and read the serving size listed. You should measure your cereal using standard measuring cups and pour it into your bowl to see how it looks in the bowl. Then you won't have to measure every time.

Cereal is a low fat choice in this food group, but you need to be careful of the sugar content of presweetened ones. If you use traditional cereals and add your own sugar, you might be getting as much or more sugar then you would with the pre-sweetened ones. You can purchase the presweetened and plain variety of a specific type such as corn flake cereal and mix the two boxes. To determine the number of teaspoons of sugar in a presweetened cereal serving, divide the total sugars on the Nutrition Facts Label by 4 (there are four grams of sugar in a teaspoon).

Breads belong in this food group and are another excellent low-fat choice, each slice containing about 70 calories, 13 grams of carbohydrates, 2 grams of protein and only 1 gram of fat. Health experts generally recommend using brown bread as it has more vitamins and fiber than white bread. However, shoppers need to read the label because all bread is not whole grain bread. Unless the label states it is 100% whole wheat it is probably white bread with caramel coloring. (Sometimes the label says "wheat" bread but if you read the ingredient list you will find enriched wheat flour to be the first ingredient.) Bread is a good source of fiber but again you can't determine the fiber content by the color of the bread. Generally whole wheat breads have a higher fiber content. To find the fiber content of your favorite bread, look at the Nutrition Facts Label. Bread should supply about 2 grams of fiber per slice. (Daily recommendations for fiber is 25-30 grams).

Pasta and rice are included in this food group and both can serve as the basis for main dishes at lunch and dinner. Instead of planning your meal around a meat choice, select pasta or rice and use the meat as the side dish. There are about 40 different shapes and varieties of pasta available at your supermarket in the dried form and additional fresh ones in the deli and refrigerator sections.

The Bread, Cereal, Rice and Pasta Group has lots of selections making it easy to consume the recommended servings of 6-11 per day. if you have questions about the Food Guide Pyramid or general nutrition questions, please call Annette Goodling at (610) 489-4315.

You can also request a copy of The Food Guide Pyramid at a cost of $1. To order, call or send requestion to Montgomery County Cooperative Extension, 1015 Bridge Road, Suite H, Collegville, PA 19426, Attention: M. Annette Goodling. Checks should be payable to Montgomery County Cooperative Extension.

Proper Outdoor Storage Keeps Round Bales Around Longer

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Moisture in large round hay bales stored outside could cause large round holes in farmers' pockets, said a member of Ohio State University Extension's Integrated Forage Management Team.

Bales kept outside for more than a year may suffer 15 percent to 20 percent hay spoilage if not preserved properly. Typically, they get wet and are stored in a way that keeps them wet, said Dave Samples, agriculture and natural resources agent at the Jackson County office of Ohio State University Extension. In comparison, bales stored inside suffer losses of less then 5 percent.

"If moisture collects in a bale stored outside and has no way to dry, there will be increased mold and fiber deterioration," he said.

For hay that is worth $90 per ton or about $50 per large round bale, each 2 percent reduction in waste saves $1 per bale, assuming the nutritive value of the good hay doesn't change.

Farmers who store large round hay bales outside for extended periods of time should keep a bale's top half covered and somehow allow moisture to escape from the bottom, Samples said. Setting bales on slatted pallets, old tires, poles or a bed of large limestone allows air to get to the base and keep them dry. Some space should be left between bales for better air flow. Round bales are shaped like a marshmallow and typically stored in the circular edge with the flat ends exposed.

In a study completed at the Jackson Branch of Ohio State University's Ohio Agriculture Research and Development Center, bales stored outside for six months with a cover or bonnet on top and placed on a slatted pallet suffered hay losses of less than 1 percent. Bales stored for the same time uncovered and on the ground had losses between 4 percent and 7 percent.

Other bales were stored for 18 months covered with a bale bonnet, wrapped or uncovered and on the ground or a solid pallet. The bonnet, that covers the top rounded half of the bale but not the flat ends, protected the top almost as well as being under roof, Samples said. Bales covered with a bonnet and stored on the ground suffered a 5 percent loss. Uncovered bales on the ground showed losses of 5.5 percent to 8 percent.

The wrapped bales, covered entirely with plastic except the flat ends, protected the top and sides but allowed water to collect at the bottom resulting in substantial waste. These bales showed 18 percent losses.

"Moisture must have gotten in the ends of the bales from a driving rain and had no way to escape," Samples said.

"Keeping the bottom of the bale dry was more important than covering the top," he said.

The solid pallet did not allow moisture to dry from the bottom of bales and resulted in almost as much waste as bales on the ground. Uncovered bales on a solid pallet suffered losses between 4.9 percent and 6.4 percent.

Many Ohio farmers make large round bales, because they take less time to produce than smaller square bales and reduce labor expenses. Most producers store these bales outside, because few can afford to invest the dollars in a permanent shelter to store them inside, Samples said.

Defeating The Radiation Beast

COLUMBUS, Ohio — It's not likely you'll find a giant man-eating squirrel roaming the countryside around a low-level radioactive waste site.

People who don't understand technology tend to create sensational stories or myths lilke this one to explain it, said Joe Heimlich, Ohio State University environmental specialist.

The myth that radioactive materials mutate people and animals into monsters and destroy the environment developed because much of the technical advances related to the use of radioactive materials were made by government agencies working in secrecy. The advances occurred so quickly, most people did not have time to learn about them. And, radioactive waste management problems at early defense and low-level radioactive waste sites increased the dread of waste facilities.

"Movies and often elaborate, unscientifically based stories by the media just intensify the myths," Heimlich said.

Providing the public with real information on technical topics is the key to breaking down these myths, especially this year as the Ohio Low-Level Radioactive Waste Facility Development Authority searches for a location for a new Ohio site. The scientific world needs to acknowledge people's fears, ask why they are afraid and provide knowledge for people to reduce fear on their own, Heimlich said. A study completed by Heimlich showed that people who are more highly educated know more about low-level radioactive waste and are less fearful of it.

The worst thing to do is tell people "don't be afraid of this," because it attacks people's core knowledge. If someone is told they are wrong to fear something when society has told them it is right, they won't know what to believe and will become confused, he said.

Radioactive materials have been used for decades in Ohio and other states by nuclear power plants, industry, hospitals, universities, research institutions and government facilities. Radiation is energy, and energy can be dangerous, so people should be wary of it. But people are exposed daily to all kinds of radioactive energy from microwaves, the sun, rocks, soils, television, X-rays, computers and other electronic equipment, and even from inside the human body, Heimlich said. One flight in an airplane provides more exposure than the worst leak that has occurred at any low-level radioactive waste site in the United States.

The level of exposure to radiation should be the public's concern, not radiation in general, he said. In fact, 82 percent of a person's annual exposure to radiation is from natural sources such as radon gas released from the earth.

Exposure to radiation is measured in millirem or mrem. Low-level radioactive waste facilities cannot expose the public to an annual radiation dose greater than 25 mrem. No existing facility has produced an annual exposure of more than 3 mrem to people outside the site. This is much less than a person's average annual radiation dose from radon of 200 mrem.

The public's average radiation exposure per year from all sources is about 360 mrem. Possible health risks begin to appear at doses of 5,000 mrem or more per year.

"If you're afraid of total exposure, minimize what you can control in everyday life and gather information so you know the questions to ask in your community," Heimlich said. "Take this knowledge and use it, rather than just putting up barriers."

The parallel between the public's fear of radioactivity and biotechnology is remarkable, Heimlich said. Many people don't understand that changing one gene does not completely change a plant or animal. Many thousands of genes are still the same. Scientists work with checks and balances, because nature won't let certain genes be inserted into different gene pools.

The scientific community needs to understand where the public's fears originate and provide information to address those concerns, Heimlich said.

Emergency Response To Manure Spills

COLUMBUS, Ohio — They may not arrive with flashing lights and sirens, but an emergency manure spill team could save the day for the environment.

John Smith, agriculture and natural resources agent at the Auglaize County office of Ohio State University Extension, came up with the idea of such a team and is forming a group in his county.

"We want to get eight to 10 people across the county to agree that if there is a manure spill they will bring their equipment and clean it up immediately," Smith said.

The volunteers would use backhoes, dozer blades and other equipment to block the flow of spilled manure and then clean the exposed area.

Extension will provide several training sessions on how to properly clean manure spills and offer mock situations to improve response time, he said.

Manure spills or runoff can occur when an irrigation pipe pumping liquid manure to a field breaks. A broken field tile can feed the manure into a ditch that leads directly to a river, stream or other waterway. Applicators can spread too much manure on an area, a manure lagoon or pond can overflow or break, or a sudden heavy rain can hit immediately after manure has been applied to a field.

Water contamination is the major concern. Ammonia in livestock manure is very toxic to fish and can cause immediate fish kills. Decomposition of manure uses oxygen in water, and the resulting oxygen deficiency could harm fish and other aquatic life. And although rare, bacteria from livestock manure can cause health problems for people or animals if ingested through food or water.

"The county game protector is concerned about the impact of a manure spill on fish and other animals and is helping organize the project," Smith said.

There are livestock manure spills in Ohio, but nothing like the much publicized 1995 spill in North Carolina where millions of gallons of manure spilled from a rain-swollen liquid manure lagoon into the New River. The Ohio Department of Natural Resources Division of Soil and Water Conservation investigates about 200 manure sediment or pollution problems in the state each year.

"We hope it never happens, but about every other year we'll have a problem in Auglaize County," Smith said.

Smith hopes to have the Auglaize County manure emergency team meet in March and finalize participation before spring farmwork begins. The group will be coordinated either through the Extension office or by a volunteer. They will establish a central contact point so people know who to call, and manure impact can be minimized in an emergency situation, he said.

"I think a team like this would be helpful across the state because there is a need, especially in heavy livestock areas," Smith said. "If you have one liquid manure system and it has a spill, then a need exists."

Doans Runners-Up

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Empire State beekeepers James and Alayne Doan of Hamlin were runners-up in the American Farm Bureau Federation's annual Young Farmer & Rancher Achievement Award competition in Nashville, Tenn.

As first runners-up, the Doans win a year's use of a Case International tractor.

The Doans, who own and operate 1,200 hives of honey bees from the Monroe County home, competed against a field of 37 state Farm Bureau representatives at the AFBF's Annual Convention, last week. Ten finalists were interviewed, and the winners were selected based on interviews and profiles submitted by the contestants.

The YF&R Achivement Award winner was produce farmer Paul Iverson, of Oregon. He was presented with the keys to a 1997 Dodge Ram 3500 4x4 extended cab, Cummins-powered pickup truck during Monday night's YF&R Recognition program.

Maryland DHIA Report For February

The February Dairy Herd Improvement information for dairy herds from the DHI processing center in Provo, Utah. The list includes herds from Maryland, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia. The information is listed by herd name, county association, number of cows in the herd and the average production per cow in the herd based on Energy Corrected Milk (ECM). ECM combines milk production and components.

The ECM formula is: (7.2 x lbs. protein) + (12.95 x lbs. fat) + (.327 x lbs. milk). To be included, the herd must have 10 cows averaging 65 pounds or more of ECM per cow, per day. All herds reported are on official DHI or DHIR test. Also listed are the top ten herds in Maryland for the Brown Swiss, Guernseys, and Jerseys, and the top seven herds for Ayrshires.

Belt-Tightening To Squeeze Farmers

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Ohio farmers will have to likely tighten their management belts in 1997 as they face lower grain prices that are expected to contribute to a 23 percent decrease in national net farm income, said agricultural economist Allan Lines.

The declint follows a year of generous grain prices that helped bring a record $52 billion net income to the nation's farms, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. This year's projected $40 billion is 7 percent lower than the five-year average of $43 billion.

Lines said Ohio farmers are in fairly good financial shape to weather the downturn. They generally avoided the temptation to overextend their debt during the price boom, he said. The few who didn't, and counted on continuing high prices, will have problems taking on more debt this year.

"There weren't too many who did that," Lines said.

Farmers should continue following a conservative strategy given that the best projections show lowered levels of income for the coming years, Lines said.

"The longer-term expectation is that lowered levels of income are expected to continue beyond '97," Lines said. "So they should be prepared for this."

This year's income decline will have a significant impact in Ohio where two-thirds of farm income comes from grain sales and one-third comes from livestock sales. Increased world stocks of grain supplies will soften prices, contributing to a 6 percent drop in national crop receipts from $108 billion in 1996 to an estimated $102 billion in 1997.

Beef producers will fare better, as nationally they reduced herds by 2 million cattle in 1996 when high grain prices made feed expensive. Lower livestock supply and lower feed costs should help the nation's livestock producers bring in $92 billion in cash receipts.

The downturn in income should cool a 16 percent to 21 percent rise in Ohio farmland values in the past year, Lines said. He estimated that farmland values averaged $2,300-2,400 on Jan. 1, 1997, compared to $1,989 one year ago. That annual increase follows a 10.5 percent hike in 1995, and a 13 percent hike in '94.

The income decline will also put a damper on new equipment purchases, Lines said. However, some farmers took advantage of pricing opportunities in the past three years to update their fleets. This year should bring a 5 percent to 7 percent increase in machinery prices, he said.

Farmers should look at all ways to control debt this year, Lines said. "If they have short-term debt, they should try to lengthen the repayment period in order to reduce cash-flow."

Overall, farmers can expect major input costs to rise this year, except for feed, which will follow the market trend of lowered prices, Lines said. Feed costs will drop by 10 percent to 15 percent.

Lines projects these increases for other major inputs: seed, 4 percent to 6 percent, as companies offer more genetically-engineered seed lines; feeder livestock, 10 percent to 15 percent, reflecting lower grain prices; fertilizers and fuels, 8 percent to 10 percent, and chemicals, 5 percent to 7 percent, all due to higher oil prices.

Net farm income is figured by subtracting depreciation expenses from net cash income. Net cash income consists of gross receipts minus production expenses.

Beef Alliances Could Boost Profits

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The biggest beef that packers, retailers and restauranteurs have with the beef industry is inconsistent cattle that lead to inconsistent products. Beef alliances could solve this problem, said on Ohio State University Extension meat specialist.

While 50 years ago there were only three main breeds of beef cattle, today there are more than 60. This increased genetic diversity makes it more difficult for buyers to get a uniform, predictable product, Duane Wulf said. Cattle reach the market in many sizes, with various lean-to-fat ratios and muscling levels.

There also are many segments within the industry — purebred or commercial producers, backgrounders, feedlots, processors, packers, retailers and restauranteurs. Traditionally, each segement worries about satisfying the next link of the chain, and doesn't consider consistency and quality of the end product, Wulf said.

"The beef industry is a very segmented industry with a lack of communication and trust between segments," he said.

For example, the meat from cattle fed vitamin E several days before slaughter will have an increased shelf life at a cost of only $1 to $2 per head. This would provide a marketing advantage for beef but usually isn't done, because it only helps the retailer and not the producer who would pay for it, Wulf said.

The ultimate contrast to beef is poultry, which is very uniform and vertically integrated. Large companies control all aspects of how poultry is raised, processed and retailed, so the end product is always uniform, and the communication barriers experienced with beef don't exist, Wulf said.

"But people don't want to give up the family aspect, so they have to find ways to communicate," he said. "Vertical contracts or alliances are a way to do that."

There are many types of alliances that could be started. A feedlot owner could set up an alliance with producers, a processor and a retailer, guaranteeing that certain qualities will exist in their cattle. The producers and feedlot owner would benefit from the alliance by receiving a higher price for their product, while the processors and retailers would profit from the premium quality and uniform products.

"Studies have shown that if the beef industry provides a more consistent product, consumers will pay for it," Wulf said.

Alliances could be set up so that all segments share in the profits. Everyone would either make money or lose money. Or, a producer could work out an alliance with a local retailer to label and market beef sold at a store or restaurant. In the past, beef has always been sold by quantity as a commodity. Producers would probably put more attention into the quality of their cattle if their name was on a label, Wulf said.

The goal of beef alliances is to make the beef industry like a vertically integrated company with communication and efficiences throughout, while retaining small family farms and businesses.

Gary Wilson raises beef near New Concord in Muskingum County and has been involved in an alliance for two years. He and a partner buy Angus calves from other producers who use bulls from Wilson' operation. By only buying calves produced by bulls from his farm, Wilson knows all the calves will have similar genetics and be of uniform size and quality.

Wilson and his partner graze the calves for a short time, vaccinate them according to the National Cattlemen's Beef Association's quality assurance guidelines and then divide similar calves into truckloads to be sold. It's easier and more profitable to sell five truckloads of steers than just five steers, especially if they are all uniform, Wilson said.

Wilson keeps extensive health records on all his calves, so that buyers know they are getting healthy animals that have been properly cared for and vaccinated.

"In a value-based marketing system, it's not so much the cattle you'll be selling, but the genetic and herd health history," he said. "Given the breeding and care of these cattle, the buyer can expect a certain lean-to-fat ratio, weight gain and other qualities."

There are initiatives developing west of the Mississippi River that are exciting, and people east of the Mississippi need to take notice, Wilson said. The alliances that form and are successful will set the standards for the type of cattle produced and the price they receive. If producers' cattle meet these standards, they will be worth a certain amount of money, and if not, they will be worth less.

Wilson plans to talk to the producers he buys calves from, let them know how their animals performed and suggest possible improvements for the future.

"Good communications is the key. One of the best thing we can do is to begin to work and cooperate together," he said. "There's nothing I'm doing that anybody else can't do."

Many Ohio beef producers are beginning to see the importance of producing consistent products. A Jan. 12-16 short course sponsored by the Ohio Beef Council and Ohio State University focusing on quality and consistency in the beef industry maxed out at 60 participants, and a waiting list was started for the next time the course is offered, Wulf said.

"If you're a beef producer, you better take note, or you're going to be left in the dust," he said.

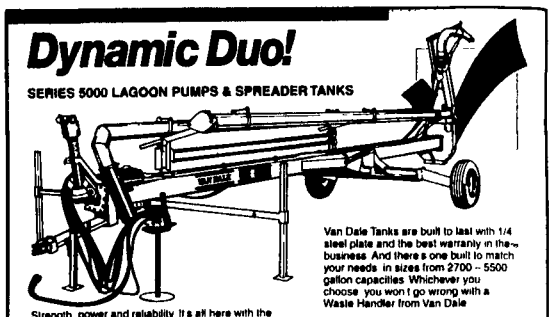
SERIES 5000 LAGOON PUMPS & SPREADER TANKS



Van Dale Tanks are built to last with 1/4 steel plate and the best warranty in the business. And there's one built to match your needs in sizes from 2700 - 5500 gallon capacities. Whichever you choose you won't go wrong with a Waste Handler from Van Dale.

Strength, power and reliability. It's all here with the new Series 5000 Lagoon Pumps. These pumps have the perfect combination of agitation volume and pressure needed to break up hard surface crust or bottom manure solids with speed and power. And with up to 5000 G.P.M. agitation capacity it can blast a stream of manure 100' or more in any direction to create an easy pumping and spreading slurry. The new Series 5000 trailer mounted or 3 point hitch by far the fastest and easiest to operate pumps on the market.

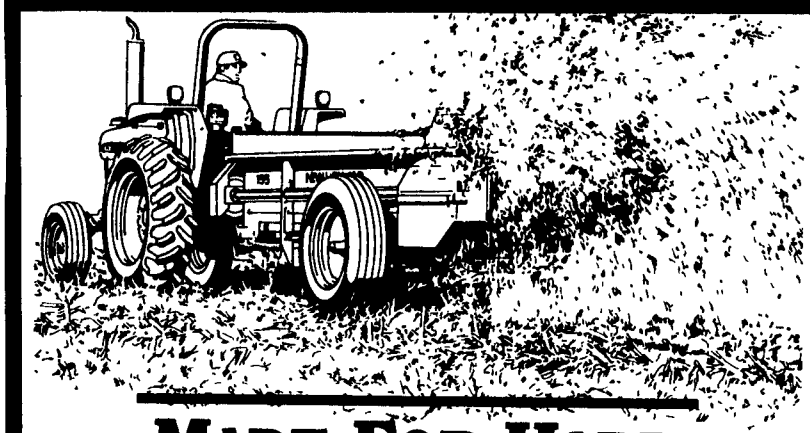
NO. 1 SPREADER



MADE FOR HARD WORK AND HEAVY LOADS

The choice of farmers in North America year after year. New Holland box spreaders can be counted on to do the heavy work that can't wait.

The Model 155 can handle up to 217 bushels on one load. The rugged A-frame hitch carries the load safely from below and does not pull it from the front.

Of course, you'll get sides and floor boards FREE for 12 years, if they fail. And only your New Holland dealer can offer this Bonded Protection.

Vitamix Makes Antibiotics Obsolete!
You Can Sell The Milk
When You Use Vitamix Instead Of Antibiotics

A dairyman's helper gave a cow an antibiotic and forgot to make a written record of it. He then went on vacation and for the next five days, the milk from 900 cows went down the drain!! The $42,000.00 lost would have bought enough Vitamix to last for years and years for that dairyman's whole herd.

You can sell the milk when feeding Vitamix. Vitamix is a mixture of vitamins, minerals, enzymes, electrolytes, and proteins, especially calculated to feed the immune system. Vitamix is the result of over 20 years research and over 20,000 feeding experiments. Vitamixingredients are so micro pulverized and easily digestible that some of them melt in the mouth and are absorbed into the bloodstream while the cow is still chewing her feed. Her organs increase the output of antibodies (white cells) within minutes, and can often double the output of antibodies within one hour after consuming Vitamix, and you can get Vitamix without a prescription. Vitamix is all natural. You just put Vitamix in the feed whenever there are symptoms of a contagious disease or infection.

The cow's immune system can cure any and every kind of contagious disease and infection quicker, safer, more consistently than any medical drug in the world when you support the immune system. The immune system is the only real defense. I keep cows and horses for feeding experiments.The last time I used an antibiotic was in 1984 and haven't lost a cow, calf or horse since I quit using antibiotics.

Any time any human or animal gets a contagious disease or any kind of infection, it is for one reason, and one reason only; The immune system failed to do an adequate job of defending against it. In other words, the immune system let you down.

Every time you use antibiotics, sulfa drug or an immune stimulator; you weaken the immune system. See the Physicians Desk Reference (PDR) for more information on the side effects of antibiotics. The information in the PDR was provided by the drug companies that make the drugs as required by law.

Shouldn't we be feeding the immune system instead? Support the immune system. Their lives and health depend on it. Feed Vitamix every time for every contagious disease or infection.
Vitamix is the best procedure in the world for Mastitis. It is quick and easy and you can sell the milk when feeding Vitamix.

How long does it take when you take the "Support the immune system approach?" I have seen calves that were down, had high fever, bloody scours and were dehydrated. One needed help to hold its head up. The only thing I gave them was Vitamix and water. In three hours, I had to run them down and get them cornered to give the Vitamix. Dairymen tell me that Vitamix is faster than anything else they ever used.

When there is a serious case of anything contagious or infectious; I give Vitamix once an hour for three hours, or until they are back on their feed and doing noticeably better. I continue Vitamix six times daily for a few days. Vitamix typically costs only $2 to $3 a day for a cow (less for a calf). The total cost for one cow for one illness is typically $8 to $10 from start to finish.

Vitamix costs less than antibiotics, and you can get it without a prescription. Vitamix is completely drug free!!! You can sell the milk when you use Vitamix !!! (When you use antibiotics, you pour the milk out for 5 days, sometimes more. You risk making a mistake and pouring all your milk out for 5 days or more.)

You save money Every Time you use Vitamix. Get some Vitamix now to keep on hand. Use Vitamix as soon as you see symptoms of anything contagious or infectious. You will know you did the right thing within hours.

Preventing and curing all contagious disease and infections boils down to this. Increasing the capacity to produce white cells (Antibodies). All white cells are made by the bone marrow. Antibiotics cause "bone marrow depression" thereby reducing its ability to make white cells to fight diseases and infection (See Physician's Desk Reference Book [PDR]).

I have done over 20,000 feeding experiments on healing the body, and have yet to find an incurable contagious disease or infection.

Why sit around waiting for a miracle? You can order Vitamix right now. Miracles are great and they do happen now and then; if you wait around one might happen for you. But the immune system is a miracle. You can order Vitamix today and keep it on hand, then you will have it when you need it.
Vitamix ...when you need a miracle. The best source of information about Vitamix is people who have used it. Ask a friend about Vitamix.

PAUL & CHERYL SATTERFIELD

Paul & Cheryl Satterfield with their two sons (left) Cody & Kyle and their daughter Samantha (right) and the Family Dog "Faye".

We are very pleased with our Master Mix representative. He keeps up with the latest developments in dairy nutrition and makes regular farm visits to answer our questions, observe cows, take forage samples and provide ration updates.

The Master Mix AIM Technology works well for us. We use it for our milk replacer, calf starter and in our lactating cow supplement. The custom-formulated cow supplement not only works, but allows three different people to mix our TMR quickly and accurately with out a lot of time wasted weighing out different ingredients or messing with a pile of bags.

Despite being overcrowded both in free stalls and bunk space our production results are good. Last year we produced 1.2 million lb. of milk per worker. In addition, we are very pleased with our herd health and reproduction.

Off-Campus Students Get Hooked On Biotech Course

NEWARK, Del. — It might have been an advertisement for fresh produce.

Live, on-camera, in Studio B of Pearson Hall at the University of Delaware, Karl Ottolini approached the students in the biotechnology class with a strange request: Who would volunteer to sample a genetically altered tomato?

When one young man offered his services, the food and resource economics instructor admitted that the shiny, perfectly ripe tomato may not have been genetically engineered but grown hydroponically — without soil. Either way, the student was willing to take a chance.

"It tastes pretty good," he said.

When the student had wiped his chin and returned to his seat, Ottolini went on to discuss the general public's reluctance to accept foods that have been genetically altered. Biotechnology — any technique that used living organisms, or parts of organisms, to develop products for specific uses — is viewed by many with suspicion and disapproval.

Ottolini had combed the supermarkets for a Flavr Savr® tomato, but the genetically improved fruits, which combine a vine-ripened flavor with a long shelf life, were unavailable. Ottolini had to make do with $4-a-pound tomatoes from Holland with a mystifying label that probably meant they were hydroponically grown.

Truth in food labeling and the general public's distrust of science and technology are only two of the issues examined in the course, Biotechnology: Science and Socio-Economic Issues. And Ottolini is one of dozens of guest lecturers from universities, industry, government and non-profit organizations who have visited to share their perspectives.

"Offering a variety of speakers keeps the material fresh and vital," said Dr. Sherry Kitto, a plant science professor, who had team-taught the course since 1988 with Dr. Lesa Griffiths of the department of animal and food sciences.

But why the videotaping? It's all part of a plan to offer the popular, multidepartmental course to a wider audience. Now students who work full-time or who live in other areas of the United States can watch the lectures on videotape at their convenience and take part in on-line discussions with classmates on campus.

To Griffiths and Kitto, change and innovation are the modi operandi for the class. Over the years they've received half a dozen grants from the university's Center for Teaching Excellence to expand their list of speakers and incorporate new teaching methods. Three years ago, they added a problem-based learning component. Students put theory into practice by forming small groups to grapple with the complex legal, social, moral and ethicals issues of biotechnology.

This year, Griffiths and Kitto were awarded a three-year, $80,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture to promote the class to distance learners.

"The distance-learning component expands biotechnology beyond the walls of the university to benefit both the agricultural community and the general public," said Kitto.

On-campus students attending the class watched Ottolini's tomato challenge on their closed-circuit monitors as his lecture was recorded. The videotape was then sent to their off-campus classmates, who used e-mail, news groups and chat rooms to receive class materials and take part in group projects.

Griffiths and Kitto used most of the USDA Higher Education Challenge Grant this year to buy equipment, including laptop computers, a UNIX server and a computer-projection system, and to hire two student interns. The office of continuing education promotes the course through its FOCUS program, and several of the lectures were made available for live satellite broadcast throughout the United States by a grant from A*DEC, a consortium of universities that promotes distance education.

"Some people fear science and technology," said Griffiths. "By opening up this course to a wider public, we hope to reduce their distrust."

Pa. Farm Bureau Wins Program Awards

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — The Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) was recognized recently by the American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF) for outstanding programs in size areas, according to a recent announcement by Guy F. Donaldson, PFB president.

The state organization was presented with a "six-star" plaque at the AFBF national convention in Nashville, Tenn.

Each of the six stars represents an outstanding achievement in that particular Farm Bureau program during the past year based on a national scoring system. PFB received stars for membership, the award-winning Internet home page.

The PFB membership achievement is the result of a record membership year with 26,625 family members in the state organization.

Here are the other five PFB awards:

•The information and public relations program was praised for its efforts in explaining agriculture to the public through the news media. PFB also publishes internal publications to keep members informed, and is responsible for information and public relations, state and local governmental affairs, national governmental relations, policy development, and leadership and organizational development.

•The state and local governmental affairs program was recognized for its successful efforts to enact the policies adopted by the membership.

•The national governmental relations program was successful in passing legislation and regulations that were friendly to farmers.

•The policy development program was singled out for the number of members participating in the policy development program; the number of policies generated and the quality of the policies.

•The leadership and organizational development program produced strong leaders and strong organizations both at the county and state levels.

Research Keeps Strawberries Sweet

WOOSTER, Ohio — Preventing strawberry diseases isn't a piece of shortcake, no matter which way you slice it. And Ohio State University's Mike Ellis has been at it for 17 years.

Ellis, a researcher in the Department of Plant Pathology at the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center, says cultural practices on strawberries are key to disease prevention for most crops.

"We are conducting studies to develop integrated pest management programs for all fruit crops grown in Ohio. Fruit rots such as gray mold, leather rot, and anthracnose are major problems," Ellis said. "Controlling these diseases is the primary concern, but reducing fungicide use is also an important goal."

Ellis will discuss disease control at the 1997 joint meeting of the Ohio Fruit and Vegetable Growers Congress and the Ohio Roadside Marketing Conference.

Through research conducted by Ellis and Larry Madden at OARDC, Ellis said they discovered that a layer of straw mulch between strawberry rows helps prevent leather rot. "A good layer of straw mulch is as effective as the best fungicide," Ellis said. "The straw prevents berries from contracting soil where the causal fungus overwinters. Mulch also prevents splashing of water from rain or irrigation which spreads the pathogen from soil to fruit." Researchers have also discovered that the gray mold fungus infects fruits almost entirely during bloom. This information is used to target fungicide applications during bloom period. "In the past, fungicides were applied five to six times from bloom through harvest to control gray mold," Ellis said. "By targeting fungicide applications only at bloom, when most infections occur, producers can obtain effective control with as few as two applications."

Reducing the number of applications results in reduced costs to growers and reduced fungicide residue on fruit. The producer and the consumer both benefit from this research.

Anthracnose is of particular concern to Ellis. "Most work is focused on how the disease spreads in the field and overwinters under Ohio conditions," Ellis said. "Anthracnose is a concern primarily to producers in the southern United States, although is has recently become a problem in Ohio. It is a very destructive disease, and we currently have very few fungicides to control it."

Ellis said that one of the most important practices for a successful crop is site selection. "Soil damage is vital to the health of a crop. If strawberries are planted on a poorly drained site, they are doomed to failure. Especially with Ohio's recent wet weather," he said.

"Most diseases result from wet growing seasons, especially fruit rots," Ellis said. "1996 was virtually a disaster for southern Ohio strawberry growers. Heavy rains through bloom and harvest result in near 100 percent losses."

Ellis has focused his research on emphasizing integrated disease management programs, and developing the components for those programs. Key issues include using disease resistant varieties, applying cultural practices; understanding the disease and pathogen biology; and minimizing fungicide use when possible.

For more information on integrated management of strawberry disease, contact Mike Ellis at the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center, 1680 Madison Avenue, Wooster, Ohio 44691.

The joint conference runs Feb. 5-8 at the Toledo Seagate Center. For registration information, contact Mike Pullins at (614) 249-2424.

Townsend Receives Friend Of Extension Honor

UNIONTOWN (Fayette Co.) — J. Richard Townsend, McClellandtown, recently received the Epsilon Sigma Phi-Friend Of Extension Award.

Epsilon Sigma Phi is the National Honorary Extension Fraternity. This is the highest award presented by Epsilon Sigma Phi to a nonextension person, and is designed to recognize outstanding support and personal involvement in extension efforts.

J. Richard Townsend has been involved in many activities in the Penn State Cooperative Extension. He has served as a leader in the 4-H market and breeding swine clubs for 15 years and served on the Fayette County Cooperative extension board for the past 10 years.

Active in the 4-H program, he has served on the Fayette County 4-H Program Development Board. Townsend works closely with the 4-H swine programs at The Keystone Livestock Exposition and The Pennsylvania Farm Show. He is active with extension in the swine programs in the southwest counties of Pennsylvania.

New Location For Keystone Beef Classic

BUTLER (Butler Co.) — The 1997 Northwest Keystone Junior Beef Classic will be held May 24-25 at the Butler County Fairgrounds. This is a change from prior years when the show was held at the Crawford County Fairgrounds at Meadville.

This is the 12th year for the all-breed steer and heifer show, which is designed as a kickoff for the summer show season. It gives youth under 21 years of age an opportunity to enter competition drawn from a larger area than usually seen at the county fairs in which they compete during the summer. In previous years, young cattlemen and women from five states have exhibited nearly 300 head of cattle.

A friendly, helpful atmosphere, along with a very reasonable $12 entry fee, make this the perfect preview show for beginning showmen.

The three-day Memorial Day Weekend allows Monday for rest and recuperation since the main show schedule takes place on Sunday, May 25. The popular Showmanship Contest, which will be divided into three age divisions, will kickoff the show at 2 p.m. on Saturday, May 24. Barnyard olympics and a pizza party are also planned for Saturday evening.

But Sunday brings the real excitment when the steers and breeding classes are judged. In the heifer show, premiums will be paid for all classes and trophies will be awarded for grand champion, reserve champion, and bred and owned. Registered heifers will show by breed and a commercial class will be held for unregistered heifers. A prize of $200 will be awarded to the grand champion heifer of the show.

The very popular county steer classes, which were introduced in 1996, will return again this year. Any county having five or more steer entries will have a county steer class with the champion of the class winning a jackpot of $10 times the number of steers shown in the class. There will also be an All Others Steer Show. The county champions will then compete with the all others show champion for grand champion steer with a prize of $250 and reserve champion steer with a prize of $100.

Entry forms will be mailed to past participants. For more information or entry forms, contact your county extension agent, or Beth Wingard, show secretary, (814) 782-3992, or write Northwest Keystone Junior Beef Classic, c/o Bob Calvert, Mercer County Extension Office, P.O. Box 530, Mercer, PA 16137.

Natural Resource Conservation School For Youth

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Are you a teen-ager looking for a school where you can have fun while learning to protect, conserve, and enhance Lancaster County natural resources? Do you enjoy spending time exploring the outdoors? Do you hunt or fish? Are you a boy or girl between the ages of 14 to 16?

Pioneer, Kimeragen To Collaborate

DES MOINES, Iowa — Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., (NYSE: PHB) and Kimeragen, Inc., announced the signing of a research collaboration through which Pioneer will utilize Kimeragen's novel "gene enhancement" technology in their crop genetic improvement efforts.

The agreement includes a non-exclusive license under which Kimeragen grants Pioneer the right to use "chimeraplasty" — a process which allows targeted genetic enhancement — in any plant species. Pioneer will focus initial development efforts on the improvement of corn genetics. Financial terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

The chimeraplasty process uses Kimeragen's patented chimeric oligonucleotide molecules — or "chimera" — to produce single or multiple DNA base pair changes in targeted genes to enhance gene expression. The application of this technology in plants can lead to crops with increased pest and disease resistance as well as improved yield and product quality characteristics.

Chimeraplasty will be used by Pioneer in developing new seed corn products with enhanced characteristics. This technology complements an ongoing effort by Pioneer to invest in and develop technologies that will enable Pioneer researchers to mine the corn genome, thus leading to improved products that benefit customers.

"Our chimeraplasty technology is uniquely suited to achieve highly selective and desirable changes in genes to yield improved genetic characteristics," said Bo Allen, senior vice president of market and business development at Kimeragen. "We are excited to begin our first commercial collaboration with a partner of the caliber of Pioneer Hi-Bred. We believe the agricultural applications of chimeraplasty have commercial value that is equally as great as that of our molecular pharmaceutical business."

"The chimeraplasty technology fits well with our research and product development effort," said Tony Cavalieri, vice president of trait and technology development at Pioneer. "In particular, this technology will help us make targeted changes in genes discovered through our Genome Project."

Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc. is the world's leading supplier of agricultural genetics and is a leading integrator of agricultural technology. Headquartered in Des Moines, Iowa, Pioneer develops, produces, and markets a full line of seeds, microbial products, and services to farmers, grain processors, and other customers worldwide.

Kimeragen, Inc. is a privately-held company headquartered in Newtown, Penn., engaged in the discovery, development and marketing of unique products for human health, plant and animal/veterinary applications. The company plans to commercialize many of these applications through partnerships with global leaders in these fields.

Tractors Receive Awards

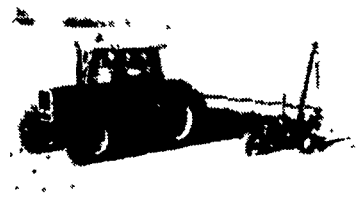
ATLANTA, Ga. — The 1996 AE 50 Award for outstanding innovation in product technology is the latest award received by Massey Ferguson's MF 6100 and MF 8100 high-performance tractors, 86 to 180 PTO horsepower.

The AE 50 recognition program is conducted annually by the American Society of Agricultural Engineers to emphasize the role of new products and systems in transferring technology to the marketplace.

An earlier award received by the MF 6100 and MF 8100 series tractors, the OEMmie Award for innovative design and performance, was announced at the annual Society of Automotive Engineers (SAE) Off-Highway Conference.

The OEMmie Award recognized the MF 6100 and MF 8100 series tractors for their innovative features and functions that set them apart from others in North America, and for advancing the state of the art and increasing equipment performance.

"These new tractor ranges have taken the lead in the emerging competitive battle for increased 'power efficiency'," said Wilfred Boyle, director, Massey Ferguson® Operations, "and this was one of the key factors in earning these awards."



Massey Ferguson's award-winning MF 6100 and MF 8100 series tractors, 86 to 180 PTO hp, are designed to deliver up to 90 percent of their engine power to the wheels and PTO for increased productivity. (130 PTO hp MF 8120 shown.)

"The MF 6100 and MF 8100 series tractors are designed to minimize power losses through the transmission and deliver up to 90 percent of their engine horsepower to the wheels and PTO," explained Boyle. "With more engine power available as 'useable power,' everyday tractor operations are more productive and efficient."

New Models Expand Planter Offerings

MOLINE, Ill. — Row-crop farmers looking to increase their planting productivity now can choose from three new front-folding planters from John Deere. These three new models are also distinctive in that they utilize the latest John Deere row units — the Max Emerge® Plus units.

The new 1770 12-row planter, for planting in 30-inch rows, replaces the previous model 7200 MaxEmerge 2 Planter with the same row and frame configurations.

Available in a new 16/31-row configuration, the front-folding model 1780 permits planting in either 16 30-inch or 31 15-inch rows with the same machine. And to meet the renewed interest in planting 20-inch corn, a new model 1780 is available with 24 rows placed on 20-inch row centers.

Besides the increased strength and convenience of the new MaxEmerge Plus row units, the 1770 Planter features tire-contact seed- and fertilizer-drive systems, and a cast wheel-module lift system. The marker arm assemblies have been upgraded to the tri-fold design for improved performance and durability. The model 1770 also features simplified hydraulics and is compatible with the model 60 Seed Cart for additional planting productivity.

The new 1780 Front-Fold Planter expands the current 1780 Planter family into the 16/31-row category. As with the smaller 12/23-row 1780, the new 16/31-model 1780 allows operators to plant in both 30- and 15-inch row spacings with the same planter. The in-line row units are the new MaxEmerge Plus units and features a tire-contact drive system. The wing-flex design and half-width disconnect provide the capability of handling a variety of planting conditions.

Rounding out the 1780 Planter family is the new 24-row, 20-inch row-spacing model. This particular model is ready-made for corn growers looking to change over to 20-inch spacing that is gaining popularity in some parts of the Corn Belt.

Farm Credit Sponsors Ag Outlook Forum

LEWISBURG (Union Co.) — Northeastern Farm Credit, ACA sponsored its 7th Annual Ag Outlook Forum recently.

This year's forum was entitled "Planning for the 21st Century: Asset Allocation and Diversification for Today's Agriculture."

The forum was held at the Best Western Country Cupboard Inn in Lewisburg. Approximately 125 people attended the event.

Northeastern Farm Credit, ACA Lewisburg/Lewistown Division Manager Dent Hawthorne attended the event.

William S. Hartman III, vice president of business development for Northeastern Farm Credit, ACA, served as master of ceremonies.

Dr. George J. Conneman, professor of ag economics at Cornell University, spoke about the agricultural economic outlook. His unique teaching style mixes humor with facts for a winning combination that both enchanted and taught the audience about the challenges and opportunities agriculture holds for future generations. Conneman is a professor of agricultural resource, and managerial economics in the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell University.

Gary Snider, farm business consultant for western New York Farm Credit, spoke about asset diversification in agriculture. Snider stressed the importance of not limiting investments to just one type of vehicle. He also stressed the importance of asset liquidity and retirement planning. Through visual models, Snider showed how $1 invested in a variety of differing investments in 1929 would look in the present. Snider has served with Farm Credit for 16 years.

Randy Shiffer of American Express Financial Advisors spoke about the investment vehicles for the year 2000. Through various visual materials, Shiffer showed how returns on investments differ and how they can grow over time. He also reiterated the importance of asset diversification, as covered earlier by Snider. Promoted in 1996 to field vice president of greater Pennsylvania market group, he oversees the activities of 90 financial advisors that cover three Farm Credit territories — Keystone, York, and Northeastern.

Jonas Kauffman, executive director for Pennsylvania Farm Credit Financial Management Services, was also a participant at the forum. He discussed tax preferences for long-term investing and using a model, showed how investment funds can grow through a variety of differing financial and tax circumstances. Kauffman, a graduate of Pennsylvania State University, previously was a Cornell cooperative extension agent in western New York for six years. He has been with Farm Credit for five years.

New Employees

Northeastern Farm Credit, ACA annoounces the addition of Tamara L. Patterson to its Lewisburg administrative offices.

Patterson had been working for Northeastern Farm Credit in a temporary capacity assuming the duties of marketing services coordinator prior to her hiring on Feb. 17. She will continue to work in the Lewisburg location.

Northeastern Farm Credit, ACA announces the addition of Sandra Lauver to its Lewistown branch office.

Lauver, of Granville, has joined Northeastern Farm Credit, ACA as a retail loan administrator. She is a graduate of Penn Highlands High School. She has been previously working for Omega Bank NA, formerly The Russell National Bank, as a loan document review analyst.

Former retail loan administrator, Linda Marks, will remain with Northeastern Farm Credit as a customer service representative. In her new position, Lauver will originate and service rural home and agricultural credit.

Vermeer Unveils New 'V' Rake

PELLA, Iowa — Two new wheel rakes, featuring hydraulic fold/unfold and adjustable raking widths "on the go," are available through Vermeer Manufacturing Co.

Vermeer's new WR V-8 and WR V-10 Wheel Rakes feature independent "floating" finger-wheels that maintain consistent rake-to-ground contact even in hard-to-reach pockets. Crop-driven fingerwheels, built with 40 high-flex steel tines and heavy-duty ball bearings, provide the raking action — eight on the V-8 and 10 on the V-10. Simple mechanical adjustments allow the operator to vary heights and angles for different crops and field conditions. No tools are required.

A hydraulic lift and fold/unfold system allows both models to quickly and easily fold to a narrow 8-foot transport width, plus adjust raking widths "on the go." Windrow widths are also adjustable from 3 to 6 feet on the V-10 (3 to 5 feet on the V-8) to match different baler pick-up widths. An optional "center wheel" rake lets you turn hay in the windrow area, ensuring uniform dry-down and fluffy, easy-to-bale windrows. Raking widths on the V-10 range from 20 feet 2 inches to 21 feet 8 inches and 17 feet 4 inches to 18 feet 4 inches on the V-8.

Agriculture Department Seeks Farmers' Market Vendors

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius announced that the department is seeking to expand its Farmers' Market Nutrition Program, which provides fresh fruits and vegetables to those enrolled in the state's Women, Infants and Children (WIC) program.

"The program provides a wonderful opportunity to promote better health while increasing the awareness and use of fresh produce grown by Pennsylvania farmers," Brosius said. He noted that last year a total of 402,759 Farmers' Market Nutrition Program checks, worth $5 each, were issued to WIC participants.

Administered by the state Agriculture Department, eligibility for the nutrition program is limited to pregnant and nursing women, who receive $25 per year; and children ages three and four years, who receive $15 per year. The checks may be used by eligible participants or their parents or guardians between July 1 and Oct. 31.

The WIC program is administered by the state Health Department.

In 1996, 425 vendors participated in the program at 280 market sites throughout the state. The program generated an additional $1.15 million in sales for the vendors.

An annual survey of nearly 600 program recipients, as required by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, found that 37 percent visited a farmers market for the first time with their program checks. The survey also showed that 46 percent of the recipients learned a new way to prepare fresh fruits and vegetables. Most importantly, 63 percent of the participants responded that the quality of produce was better than at their regular grocery store.

As a pilot program in 1988, the program served only two counties in Pennsylvania. Today it serves more than 100,000 participants in all 67 counties and will provide additional sales for the more than 420 participating vendors.

For more information, please contact the Agriculture Department's Bureau of Food Distribution at (800) 468-2433.

Massey Ferguson Adds Tractors To Line

ATLANTA, Ga. — Massey Ferguson is introducing two new additions to its popular 1200 series compact tractor line.

The new 16.6 horsepower, four-wheel-drive MF 1205 model is ideal for the customer looking for a versatile, full-featured tractor at a value price.

The new 18.2 horespower MF 1215, available in two-wheel-drive and four-wheel-drive models, is ideally suited for light utility work and large acreage mowing.

The MF 1205 and MF 1215 features naturally-aspirated three-cylinder diesel engines with indirect fuel injection for reduced exhaust emission and quieter operation. Glow plugs are standard for quick cold weather starts. mount PTO as standard equipment for increased versatility.

The MF 1205 and MF 1215 compact tractors can handle a wide variety of implements with a category I three-point hitch. A response control regulates the rate of drop of both heavy and light implements and the position lets the operator set and maintain the position of the implement for The lugging ability of these engines reduces the need for downshifting in tough field applications.

A choice of hydrostatic or standard gear transmission is available for precise matching of speed to job applications. The hydrostatic transmission offers an infinite range of forward and reverse speeds without clutching, and foot pedals make switching between forward and reverse quick and easy. The standard gear transmission has six forward and two reverse gear ranges with a straight line shift between first and reverse. Forward speeds range from .75 to 11.6 mph and reserve speeds from 1.2 to 6.2 mph.

Both the MF 1205 and MF 1215 feature a rear PTO and mid-maximum productivity.

Ultrasound Data Approved For Hereford Carcass EPDs

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — A new program for calculating carcass trait expected progeny differences (EPDs), based on ultrasound, has been announced by the American Hereford Association (AHA). The program is in effect immediately, with EPDs to be calculated this fall from ultrasound measurements taken on yearling breeding cattle.

"The demand for carcass EPDs in the commercial cattle industry has grown to the point that purebred breeders are challenged to produce this information," said Dr. John Hough, AHA's director of research and performance programs. "Based on considerable investigation by the AHA board of directors and staff, as well as advice from leading researchers, we're satisfied that ultrasound technology can now be effectively used to calculate carcass trait EPDs.

"University of Georgia animal scientists will calculate EPDs for rib eye area, backfat thickness, and percent intramuscular fat (marbling). If enough data is accumulated this spring, Hereford carcass EPDs will be available this fall."

Ultrasound data will be collected on yearling cattle — bulls and heifers — between 330 and 430 days of age. Both sexes can be scanned, measured and included because more accurate EPDs can be calculated on a wider range of cattle. In order to provide the most accurate data possible, cattle will be measured by Beef Improvement Federation (BIF)-certified technicians.

"It's important to note that all EPDs are calculated based on contemporary group comparisons," Hough said. An ultrasound contemporary group is a group of yearling cattle of the same sex that has been managed alike and raised together since birth.

Explaining the basis behind genetic evaluation, Hough said that animals can be accurately compared because sires are used in more than one herd. Carcass information from different herds must have reference sires or common animals that tie herds together. In other words, the ultrasound data from breeder A can be directly compared to the data from breeder B if they use a common sire or have dams sired by common sires.

"With our widespread collection of weight information and use of A.I., connections between herds are usually very good," he said. "Carcass EPDs will be calculated from all herds collecting appropriate ultrasound data that have suitable genetic ties. If we find a herd that is not genetically tied to the main carcass database, we'll notify the breeder so that future genetic ties can be made and the existing data can then be used in evaluations.

"The ultimate goal of this new AHA program is to gather more information about carcass traits of Hereford cattle. The extensive Hereford study conducted at Colorado State University scientifically documented the feed efficiency and fewer days needed on feed for Hereford cattle to finish. It further certified that steaks from Hereford steers consistently rated superior to the USDA mine run of similar USDA grades. With this background, coupled with the advent of carcass trait EPDs, the Hereford breed will continue its positive influence on America's beef industry.

"Ultrasound data offers Hereford breeders a much quicker and easier way to reach this goal," Hough said. "In addition, actual data collected from steer carcasses can also be utilized in a multiple-trait genetic analysis. However, we anticipate the majority of the genetic information will be derived from ultrasound measurements from yearling breeding cattle rather than actual steer carcasses."

For more information about the AHA Ultrasound Carcass EPD Program and data forms, contact the AHA research and performance records department at (816) 842-3757.

More Bacon With Eggs: Enhanced Eggs Prevent Diseases In Piglets

RAPID CITY, S.D. — Disease-preventing eggs can ward off intestinal diseases in young pigs, Canadian research shows.

Researchers at the University of Manitoba were able to prompt chickens to produce antibodies to a common form of the E.coli bacteria in their eggs. When fed to piglets, those eggs prevented intestinal diseases.

The approach may have a broad range of applications against diseases in animals and humans, said Ronald Marquardt, the animal scientist who conducted the study.

"In our studies, this method was able to completely counteract the effects of E.coli," Marquardt said. "Pigs that did not receive the treatment were severely affected by disease."

In the research, a modified form of the E.coli organism was administered to chickens. That prompted the chickens to produce antibodies. Those antibodies also are secreted into the yolks of their eggs.

"We found that you could either purify the antibodies or simply feed the whole egg to pass the protection along to young pigs," Marquardt said.

"The standard approach is to treat the pigs with antibiotics, but we're seeing a growing problem with resistance," he noted. "The heavy reliance of the livestock industry on antibiotics actually promotes the development of antibiotic resistance in these bacteria."

That's not a problem with antibodies, he said. Where antibiotics attack bacteria and allow only the resistant forms to survive, antibodies simply bind to the organisms and prevent them from being pathogenic.

"In the future, research will show that you can develop antibodies for a whole battery of diseases," Marquardt said. "This is a very natural process that leaves no residues. No harm comes to the chickens or the pigs, and you avoid the need to use injections." In fact, the chickens also gain protection from the antibodies.

Marquardt said diarrhea caused by intestinal diseases in weanling pigs results in reduced growth and death. The diseases cost producers millions of dollars each year. "Pigs are born with immature immune systems, making them very susceptible to these problems."

About three weeks after weaning and after being fed the antibody-containing eggs, the pigs begin to produce their own antibodies against disease. Their digestive systems also become more developed and begin breaking down the egg-based antibodies.

Additional research will focus on protecting the egg-borne antibodies from digestion so they can provide protection for older pigs.

Marquardt outlined results of the research to scientists, students, and extension specialists gathered for the national meeting of the American Society of Animal Science in Rapid City, July 23-26.

Think about it Every time you get to the end of the row, you say to yourself, "If my tractor had a better turning radius, then I'd spend less time turning around. And more time turning a profit"

Spend More Time Turning A Profit And Less Time Turning Your Tractor.

Don't dream anymore Because the new turning radius on the 9455 AGCO® Allis tractor has arrived How did we do it? For starters, the frame has been contoured inward four inches on each side of the engine And we've recessed the space between the grille and radiator, giving you even more clearance between the front tires and frame We've also sculpted and sized the side quarter panels without disturbing the tractor's overall appearance

- The 9455 has 155 PTO hp and a 4-speed powershift transmission with 32 forward and 32 reverse well-spaced speeds
- To give you a wider selection of working speeds, we've placed gear ratios close together, so that engine horsepower can be matched with implement capacities and field conditions
- The Series 40 liquid-cooled engine has a combustion chamber design which provides excellent fuel economy while reducing exhaust emissions.
- The AWD models feature a true centerline drive shaft for more efficient power transfer and less maintenance

As always, behind every AGCO Allis tractor, there's a 4-year/4,000-hour warranty backing it. To see the new turning radius on the 9455, stop by and see us. We'll be glad to show you how much time and money you can save

Four Ag Departments Merge At Univ. Of Md.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Merger for greater efficiency and economies of scale — not downsizing — is the watchword as four departments are merged into two in the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Maryland at College Park (UMCP).

The two new entities are the Department of Natural Resource Sciences and Landscape Architecture and the Department of Animal and Avian Sciences. Their status was made official Jan. 1 upon approval by Donald N. Langenberg, chancellor of the University of Maryland System.

The merger proposal previously had been approved by William E. Kirwan, UMCP president; the College Park faculty/staff senate; and Dr. Thomas A. Fretz, dean of the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources (AGNR).

Fretz expects that the merger will result in greater collaboration by AGNR faculty members on problems and issues facing the Maryland agricultural community. It also should result in greater administrative efficiency to permit working within budgetary constraints.

He noted that identity of the four former departments will be largely maintained, and most course prefixes in the university catalogs will be unchanged.

Former entities in the department of natural resources sciences and landscape architecture were the department of agronomy and the department of horticulture and landscape architecture. Dr. Richard A. Weismiller is the acting chairperson. Weismiller formerly served the department of agronomy in a similar capacity. He also was acting chairperson for horticulture and landscape architecture. He and about two-thirds of the faculty and staff members of the new department moved into state-of-the-art administrative and research facilities in the new Plant Sciences Building at the university.

The former departments of poultry science and animal sciences comprise the new department of animal and avian sciences at UMCP. Dr. Dennis C. Westhoff is the acting chairperson. Westhoff formerly served as chairperson of the department of animal sciences and acting chairperson for poultry science. He also chaired the former department of dairy science, which was merged with animal science in 1982.

His entire faculty and staff is housed in the university's Animal Sciences/Agricultural Engineering building, completed in 1994. It, too, contains modern offices and laboratories for departmental research in poultry and animal sciences, as well as aquaculture.

WE HAVE STIR AERATOR TO HELP WITH

BIG PERFORMANCE...SMALL PRICE

SIMPLE PROCEDURE: the aerator works directly into the bed of material, forming its own windrow. Windrows can be formed from piles of nearly any size. Alleyways are not required when using the Brown aerator, so there is a great reduction in space requirements. The aerator's reverse rotation works the material from the bottom up and to the side, assuring complete mixing and agitation. LOW MAINTENANCE: the aerator is a simple design, the principle as a material mover has been proven with over 30 years experience in practical application. The aerator is hydraulically driven and equipped with patented wearplates or paddles, both of which are easily replaced.

Lehigh County Holds Mini Farm Show

NEW TRIPOLI (Lehigh Co.) — It was beautiful spring-like weather, the last day of February, and everyone wanted to get out of the house and get away from "Cabin Fever. Where did they all head — you guessed it — The Lehigh County Farm Bureau Mini-Farm Show at the Trexler Mall, Trexlertown. This year, the Lehigh County Farm Bureau Women's Committee held their 18th Farm Show. Acting as co-chairman of the event was Diane Schlauch and Priscilla Greiss, both from Slatington.

Friday night, Turkey Hill donated the Giant Ice Cream Sundae, which attracted the largest audience in their eleven years of participation. The beautiful masterpiece contained 126 gallons of ice cream, 5 gallons of chocolate syrup, 5 gallons of bing cherries, and 20 lbs. of pecans. The first sundae was dished out by PA Farm Bureau President, Guy Donaldson from Adams County. The remainder of the sundae was then dished out by the Women's committee, with help from the other Farm Bureau Board Members. Over 2,600 ample servings were given away to the public in less than two hours.

Saturday was a full day of entertainment and enjoyment. Starting with the North-Lehigh 4-H Seeing Eye Puppy Club demonstration. At 2:00 p.m., for those folks who love to bake or eat, they held the First Annual Apple Pie Contest. The judges for this event were three Lehigh County Commissioners: Percy Dougherty, Jane Ervin and Sterling Raber and a retired Home Economics Teacher Robby Reitz. The prize money for the best pies was donated by: $150 Commonwealth Bank — Winner Linda Thomas; $100 East Penn Bank — Winner Nancy Wanamaker; and $50 First Union — Winner Tracey Binder. After the pies were judged, Pete Krall auctioned the top three pies and the rest of the pies were sold. The "Kids Dairy Program" is always fun, the best milk mustache, the best cow mooing contest, etc. Saturday night, Sherwood Zettlemoyer of Zettlemoyer's Auction Co., held an auction of donated items from local merchants and friends of agriculture. At this auction, over $1,700 was raised for the "Ag in the Classroom" scholarship program.

Sunday afternoon the "Old Time Plowboys Club" organized the Pedal Tractor Pull Contest. Line Dancing was the afternoon feature on center stage.

For all three days, the mall was filled to capacity with agriculture exhibits and displays as well as sampling of ag commodities and demonstrations.

Sampling was being done by Hatfield Quality Meats, Alderfer Meats, Kuntzler and Leidy. Beatrice foods gave samples of many kinds of cheese and Lehigh Valley Dairies donated by Strawberry Milk. Lines formed many times during the weekend to sample the goodies.

Education of the non-farm consumer was on the mind of the ladies in the planning of the show. All of the major players in agriculture in the Lehigh Valley were present with educational displays. Groups included were Agriculture Extension, Farm Credit, Soil Conservation Service, Lehigh/Northampton Dairy Princess Program, Lehigh County Holstein

Ag was king for the weekend event. Over 5,000 people came to the Mall Show over the weekend.

The 126 gallon sundae is completed. Dipping is Karen Boyd, Mertztown; Brian Dietrich, New Tripoli and Guy Donaldson, President of Pennsylvania Farm Bureau from Adams County.

The two co-chairmen of the very successful mini-farm show were L to R, Priscilla Greiss and Diane Schlauch, both of Slatington.

New to the Mini-Farm Show this year was the Apple Pie Baking Contest. There were 26 entries and the winner was Linda Thomas from Emmaus. Following the judging, the pies were auctioned to the highest bidders. Pictured (L to R), Auctioneer, Peter Krall; Mrs. Thomas, with her two children; Henry Gruber, New Tripoli, buyer of the Grand Champion Pie and Nancy Semmel, chairman of the Lehigh County Farm Bureau Women's Committee.

Making Hay: A Costly Tradition?

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Beef producers who make their own hay may be baling up their profits, said Henry Batholomew, agriculture and natural resources agent at the Hocking County office of Ohio State University Extension.

Hay production costs — land charges and variable costs for seed, fertilizer, labor, fuel, etc. — are nearly $57 per ton of hay. When those costs are combined with the equipment costs of a tractor, mower, rake, baler and more that are needed for hay harvesting, baling hay may not be as economical as many people think, Bartholomew said.

"Equipment costs aren't something you see when you do your books every year, because most people look at items such as a baler as a once in a lifetime purchase and forget about it," he said.

But a study by Bartholomew showed that hay harvesting equipment costs ranged from $63 per ton for a part-time operation to less than $4 per ton for a very large operation. These costs are in addition to the $57 per ton variable costs. Usually, a farmer can buy a large 1,000-pound round bale for $25 or less. A ton of hay in Ohio sells for $50 or more than $100 depending on quality.

Hay equipment costs were calculated by adding the market value of equipment used to harvest hay. Any piece of equipment that was used only a portion of the time for hay harvest had its proportional share of the market value included in the calculation. Twenty percent of the total value of the equipment was used as the annual equipment cost — including depreciation, repairs and maintenance. This cost was then divided by the tons of hay harvested annually. In a situation where an operator either hired or contracted custom work, these costs were added or credited to the operation costs.

"In the United States, it's just kind of accepted that everyone has to own hay making equipment," Bartholomew said. "The goal of this study was to get people to stop and think about how much it costs to produce hay, and maybe people will start looking for other options when they realize what they're doing to themselves."

In New Zealand, most farmers contract with someone to bale the fields they own, he said. New Zealand farmers are the lowest-cost producers of livestock products in the world, with beef prices only about 60 percent of the United States and milk prices about half.

A 1987 study showed that Ohio beef producers' annual hay costs averaged $186 per cow and ranged from $78 for the lowest-cost herds to $299 for the highest-cost herds. With beef producers currently making less than $250 per cow, feed costs are clearly preventing some operations from making a profit, Bartholomew said.

To lower costs, producers can buy hay or have their hay baled by a contractor. Buying from others lets farmers shop around for higher quality hay.

Producers can reduce the amount of baled hay they need by extending the grazing season or timing calvings to occur then the best pasture is available. Farmers could feed more grain and make less hay. Corn is back to an economically feasible price for livestock feed. Shelled corn at $2.60 to $2.70 per bushel is as cheap as a $30 big round bale, Bartholomew said.

The bottom line is that if producers can buy hay for cheaper than they can make it, and the quality is comparable, then it would be to their advantage to buy, Bartholomew said.

"We still need hay balers in the community, but maybe not as many as we've had in the past," he said.

Mini Farm Show

Club, Lehigh County Potato Club, Lehigh Valley Beekeepers Assn., Trexlertown Grange, ASCS, PA Department of Agriculture, Schnecksville Community Fair and PA Grape & Wine Association.

The 4-H Club Program in the valley was well represented. The Wildlife, Rabbit and Livestock Clubs had a Petting Farm with many sheep and pigs, a horse, a baby calf, rabbits, guinea pigs, chickens and goats.

Compliments of Heidel Hollow Farm, an incubator with baby chicks hatching, delighted many of the youngsters and adults.

Scattered throughout the mall were twenty country crafters. They were selling anything from beautiful hand crafted wind socks to intricate hand made lace items. All crafters were required to have a country theme.

The Trexlertown UCC Quilters demonstrated quilting during the show, and the East Penn Fiber Guild were spinning and weaving for the enjoyment of the public, as well as answering questions about the craft.

This marks the eighteenth year for the Mini-Farm Show. As with most successful programs, it takes a very strong committee to make it happen. The Women's Committee is made up of Nancy Semmel, Schnecksville; Janet Bachman, Schnecksville; Karen Boyd, Mertztown; Elaine Dietrich, New Tripoli; Sonia Fink, Germansville; Priscilla Greiss, Slatington; Dawn Lennon, New Tripoli, Frances Lichtenwalner, Macungie; Annette Pattishall, New Tripoli; Diane Schlauch, Slatington; Claire Shelly, Zionsville; and Minnie Young, Emmaus.

Students From Philadelphia Attend Farm Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Twenty-seven students from the Walter Biddle Saul High School in Philadelphia, have come to the Pennsylvania Farm Show to complete in the annual events. Bright, excited, and "a little bit nervous," the teens discussed the rigid standards utilized by their school during its student selection process. What is so special about Walter Biddle Saul? Just about everything, according to students and advisors.

The high school is located in a Philadelphia suburb and has its own farm right across the street. Here they raise horses, dairy cattle, sheep and swine. Students must first pass several placement tests, meet prior academic requirements, and endure an extensive interview process. If selected, they are given the opportunity to participate in programs concentrating on preparing them for their future careers.

The school, previously Wissihicken Farm Shool for boys, was once a school where "the bad boys" were sent to learn discipline and reform. Decades later, it has evolved into an institution that provides great opportunities to motivated students who desire to build agricultural backgrounds for themselves. Students brought ten sheep and ten swine to complete in The Farm Show.

Tiffany Turrentine, a 17-year-old senior who plans to major in animal bio science, is confident that her school's animals will place well in the competition. Students spend the entire school year preparing and caring for their livestock. Tanya Ray, also a senior, plans to be a vet technician and considers her visit to The Farm Show, "a great opportunity to help pursue her career." The students are extremely positive, focused and eager for the competition.

Randy Luckenvill, one of the teachers accompanying the teens, has been involved in two previous shows. When asked about the criteria for being selected for the show he replied honestly, "There are other roads to success besides high academics." Although they stress the importance of academics at Walter Biddle Saul, students who excel in other areas are also recognized for their efforts. The result is a group of inspired kids with the proper drive necessary for success.

Cattle I.D. Program Requires Planning

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Livestock identification is one of many management tools available to help you obtain top profit from your cattle herd. While branding is still essential to a number of cattlemen, other methods of identification are becoming increasingly used. These include freeze branding, tattooing and ear tagging with plastic, brass, aluminum and computer bar-coded tags.

If you're not currently using a good system of animal identification, it may be time to evaluate your long-term herd goals and start an I.D. system. In order to cut costs, unproductive animals must be identified.

It is helpful to first establish, or review, long-term herd goals. More than likely, you will want to select animals for superior fertility and other economically-important traits. In this case, bulls generally contribute about 80 percent of the genetic improvement of a herd over several years. The remaining 20 percent comes from the cows. Simple math tells you sire selection is extremely important. At this point, you may wish to consider selecting bulls or semen using Expected Progeny Differences available from breed sire summaries.

Dr. John Hough, director of research and performance for the American Hereford Association said herd goals can be established by following a three-step process.

"First, you must decide what you want. For example, your goal may be to increase weaning weights. Secondly, decide what action needs to be taken and, third what must be recorded to evaluate progress. With these primary goals in mind, you can outline the requirements for a record system that fits your operation."

Three things should be considered for an identification system: accuracy, ease of use and reliability.

A logical numbering system should be followed such as birth order in a given year. For instance, "701" could be the first calf born in 1997.

For accuracy, I.D. numbers must be easily interpreted and unique to individual animals. It is very important to begin identification when a calf is born. Also, implement a checking system at every stage, so errors or abnormalities can be corrected. The recording method chosen should require the least possible effort for you and be as stress-free as possible for the animal. Accuracy is key. Be sure to record the right information and process it correctly.

"By following these procedures, your identification program should be successful," Hough said. "It is helpful to check with your veterinarian and/or animal health distributor to ensure an adequate, continued supply of I.D. equipment. They can also recommend the most cost-effective I.D. system for your herd.

NAAB Applies For Funds To Be Allocated For Semen Promotion

COLUMBIA, Mo. — As a member of U.S. Livestock Genetic Export, Inc., (USLGE), The National Association of Animal Breeders (NAAB) has applied for funds to be allocated to qualified private firms for promotion of USA origin bovine semen in international markets.

The funds are made possible under the auspices of the Market Access Program (MAP) administered by the USDA Foreign Agricultural Service (FAS). The final funding level for the USLGE/NAAB Branded program will be determined by FAS.

The USLGE/NAAB Branded Program supports the efforts of USA firms to promote private labels of frozen bovine semen throughout the world. The ultimate objective is to increase the total market for bovine semen from all USA exporters. Allocation of available funds will be made to qualified USA firms on an equitable and uniform basis within the guidelines of USDA-FAS and consistent with the objectives of the MAP program.

Under the program, participants will be reimbursed up to 50 percent of eligible promotion expenses up to the amount of their respective allocations authorized by NAAB. The 1997 program year will be July 1, 1997 thru June 30, 1998. All program expenses must be incurred before the end of the program June 30, 1998.

USA companies desiring to take advantage of this program must submit an application to NAAB using the form prescribed by NAAB. The deadline for receipt of applications by NAAB is noon, Tuesday, April 15, 1997.

In determining the qualifications of each applicant and fund allocations, consideration will be given to previous experience with exporting of bovine semen from the USA and the applicant's ability to provide staff support to supervise and carry out the proposed promotional activities. Willingness and ability to provide adequate supplies of USA origin bovine semen of the quality desired by foreign buyers in response to the demand generated by the promotional activities must be demonstrated.

The promotional activities proposed by each applicant will be individually evaluated and approved by NAAB and the USDA-FAS. Therefore, a detailed description of the promotional activities proposed to be funded under the MAP program, including a budget of the funds to be expended by country, is required. The method by which the applicant proposes to evaluate the success of the proposed promotional activities must be included.

The applicant must own the bull whose semen is promoted and own the label or brand name under which the semen is to be promoted, or by written agreement with the proprietor, be assigned exclusive rights of representation for the semen and brand to be promoted. All semen and brands to be promoted must be USA origin.

Each participating company will be required to enter into a contract with NAAB and will pay a fee to NAAB for administrative services in accordance with the amount of program funds allocated.

Additional information about the program and applications are available upon request from NAAB by contacting Dr. Gordon A. Doak, P.O. Box 1033, Columbia, MO 65205, (573) 445-4406.

Jamesway Technology Takes a Giant Leap Forward!

JAMESWAY

BIG JIM. Quantum™ SYSTEM

FOR CONVENTIONAL SILOS AND BOTTOM UNLOADING SILO CONVERSION SYSTEMS (BUCS)

- FASTER FEED UNLOADING -up to 35 tons per hour or up to 1,666 pounds per minute.
- HIGHER SILO CAPACITY - pack up to 35% more forage into your silo.
- GREATER FEED VALUE - ensile forage between 55% to 65% moisture content
- EASIER MAINTENANCE AND REPAIR - less wear and tear and components are accessible.

ROTO-MIX FEED MIXERS

Quality feed means increased consumption, therefore, higher production levels. With ROTO-MIX IV you reduce fines, minimize shrinkage, and eliminate dead spots. The gentle tumbling action mixes fragile flaked and high-moisture ingredients without grinding, resulting in a fluffier, more nutritional ration.

The ROTO-MIX patented mixing system uses a rotor to gently lifts the feed past the wedging point of the lower side auger, keeping fines to a minimum and reducing nutritional loss.

The ROTO-MIX end-to-end... side-to-side mixing system provides the most thorough TMR available, ensuring that your cattle will consume a balanced ration of nutrients in every pound of feed they eat.

Check all the ROTO-MIX advantages... the bottom line is what counts.

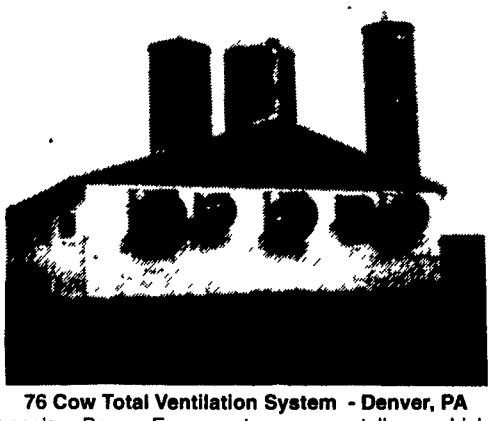
Breeze Master



76 Cow Total Ventilation System - Denver, PA

Lapp's Barn Equipment can install a high-performance/high efficiency tunnel ventilation system in your barn. A tunnel ventilation system will give you an even air flow throughout your barn of 2-5 mph. This gives you the advantage of better controlling temperature to give your cows more comfort which means more milk!! Also, a tunnel ventilation system eliminates circulating fans, provides summer and winter ventilation and controls fly problems! An optional unit can even automate your ventilation so you will never even have to worry about it when you're not there, so you can concentrate on other things!

At Lapp's, we sell high quality ventilation systems manufactured by Acme Engineering, Acme products feature such things as

- Galvanized Construction
- Wide Cambered Propeller
- Rivited Blades
- Unique Captured Bearings
- Vertical Support Frame
- Screens Pre-cut
- Totally Enclosed Motors
- Optional Discharge Diffuser Cone
- Optional Belt Tightener

BIRDS STRUT THE EARTH AS LIVING DINOSAURS

Dr. Regina Vasilatos-Younken
Associate Professor
Poultry Science

Experts in prehistoric matters, including paleontologists and most small children, will knowledgeably tell you that dinosaurs became extinct more than 65 million years ago.

The commonly-held view is that this occurred through some catastrophic event which obliterated not only "Dino," but most prehistoric birds and mammals, while opening the evolutionary doors for modern species to develop.

Recently, however, through the application of some modern techniques of molecular biology, combined with long-established fossil data, there is convincing evidence that quite a few species of birds survived the epoch-changing event.

To reach this new insight, differences in the DNA of modern birds were used as a molecular clock to determine the age of various lines. The premise was made that as two species evolve, for example, their genes slowly accumulate different mutations. The more differences that can be measured between the two species of birds, the longer the time that has passed since the species evolved from a common ancestor. By tracing these mutational differences back far enough, biologists can determine the order in which species branched off from each other.

By first looking at mutational differences between two closely related species of birds, such as ostriches and rheas, and dating the split between these using fossil records, researchers could establish the time associated with a given number of mutations. They then analyzed another closely related pair, this time of shorebirds, the same way, then averaged the rate of mutation between pairs. By using this average and counting the additional mutations between the pairs, they could calculate the age of the last common ancestor for all four species.

They found that this common ancestor lived more than 98 million years ago, long before the Cretaceous-Tertiary (K-T) boundary, the evolutionary bookmark for the extinction of prehistoric species such as the dinosaurs.

Many experts now believe at least 21 different species of birds evolved from ancestors that predate the K-T boundary. If correct, these presently existing avian species are literally "walking dinosaurs" in terms of evolutionary origin, and include species such as parrots, wrens, and penguins. Because the molecular data used to reach these conclusions must be calibrated with fossil data, and the latter can often be controversial, some scientists disagree and are not yet willing to dismiss the K-T extinction theory.

While waiting for a broader consensus to be reached, it's intriguing to consider the number of walking (or perhaps, flying) dinosaurs among us.

Price Is Right For Higher Yields

NORCROSS, Ga. — Spend money to make money ... right? Absolutely. After all, farming is an investment and obtaining a return on that investment is what it is all about. Just like the stock market, the goal is to invest wisely. So how do we invest wisely in farming? Invest in higher yields.

Profit is the difference between the total return from sale of the crop and the costs, both fixed and variable, of producing that crop. It is what is left over after all the bills are paid. If nothing is left over, there is no profit. Think of profit as a pie and costs as slices taken from that pie. Higher yield gives a bigger pie to work with and greater opportunity for more leftovers.

Total returns is the product of yield and price. Some years prices are great and some years they are not so great. The question is, what can growers do to increase total returns? Unfortunately, they seldom have much say about price. Market factors such as supply and demand, government farm programs and so forth basically determine crop price. Price may be influenced by quality, but within a specific grade, price is, as previously stated, out of growers' hands in most situations.

Yield level significantly influences total return. The greater the yield ... the greater the total return. This is the area where growers can dramatically make a difference and why best management practices ... BMPs ... are so important.

BMPs are those practices aimed at optimizing yield. Some require more cost, such as additional fertilizer or more total irrigation water to reach a higher yield goal. Others cost no more or little more than previous practices. Examples of low cost inputs are selecting improved seed and planting to a higher plant population. Good management decisions are no cost inputs that can significantly increase yield. For example, changing the planting date to a more optimum time for a specific variety or adjusting equipment for more precise and uniform application of fertilizer are no cost inputs.

High yields obtained through BMPs have additional benefits beyond more profit. They also protect the environment because:

- Efficiency of inputs such as fertilizer and crop protectants is increased.
- Earlier ground cover is achieved which decreases erosion hazard.
- More crop residue is produced which increases water infiltration when residue is incorporated. Erosion hazard is also reduced.
- Greater root development reduces erosion potential.
- More yield per acre increases freedom to idle fragile acres.

High yield management involves careful investment of inputs. Done properly, the return can be substantial. If not, potential is lost and risk is actually increased because all controllable inputs are not being properly managed ... some are being left to chance. There will always be risk involved in farming from factors beyond our control. But let's be sure to minimize that risk by managing those factors that are, in fact, manageable.

The price is always right for higher yields ... with BMPs.

THE COMING SEASON

Many activities are already under way for the coming growing season.

Producers of vegetable transplants have either started their plants or will soon be seeding. As is the case with most other plant production processes, there are many factors that can cause failure during the growing process.

Recently, several agents from this area hosted a vegetable transplant production meeting in York County. Topics of discussion included diseases, greenhouse environment control, and the actual growing of transplants.

I know there are many growers in the area who were not able to attend the meeting so I thought I would summarize some of the information presented in this month's column. While the meeting was specifically for vegetables, the principles discussed will often apply to the production of bedding plants as well.

Disease prevention in the greenhouse starts with sanitation. Any materials that are reused from the previous production cycle need to be cleaned and disinfected. This includes flats, benches, and even the greenhouse itself.

A "homemade" solution of 10 percent bleach or a preparation made from a commercially-produced disinfectant product should be used for this process. Be sure that anything to be disinfected stays wet for at least 20 minutes. If bleach is used, be sure to rise the flats, benches, etc. before seedlings come into contact with them. If a commercially prepared product is used then be sure to follow the manufacturer's directions for mixing and application.

Sanitation in the greenhouse also includes removing/elimination other sources of infection. One such source is weeds under the benches. All weeds should be pulled or killed with an herbicide prior to bringing any vegetable seedlings into the greenhouse. Ornamental plants should also be removed from the vegetable growing area whenever possible. Many viruses will survive in weeds and ornamental plants and then can be easily spread to the nearby vegetable plants. The final disease vector in the greenhouse is an established insect population, particularly thrips. Failure to control thrips prior to starting your vegetable transplants is an invitation to a disease outbreak (not to mention a thrips problem!).

The next component for successful transplant production is selection of a good growing medium. The key qualities of a growing mix are: sterility, good drainage and aeration, and good water holding ability. I don't think there is one "ideal" mix for all operations since each grower will use some different management procedures. However, almost all growers I know are now using a soilless mix because it has the key qualities listed.

Seed selection is another important link in the transplant production cycle. One reference I have says to "Obtain the best seed money can buy!." The authors state that the cost of the seed relative to the total production cost is small, so it pays to get good seed. Good seed will have a high germination rate, the resulting seedlings will have good vigor, and the seed itself should be free of any diseases. However, there are no guarantees that any seed will be completely disease free. Seed can be disinfected but this is a time consuming and sometimes tricky process. Be aware that you should not treat seed that was treated by the supplier and you should only treat seed just prior to sowing.

Vegetable seeds should be germinated as quickly as possible to help reduce susceptibility to disease. The seedlings should be kept at a warmer temperature early in their development to have the cotyledons come free from the seed coat as soon as possible. This reduces the opportunity for disease transferal from the seed coat to the seedling. Once the seedlings are free of the seed coat then they can be transferred to a cooler location, if necessary, for growing on.

There were many details of greenhouse environmental control discussed along with the resulting effects on the growth of seedlings when changes are made within this closed environment. Unfortunately, the length of this column prevents a detailed discussion of most of these factors. However, one important factor in the control of plant height and development in the greenhouse is temperature, particularly the difference between day and night temperatures. As you probably already know, warmer temperatures promote greater seedling growth. One problem that sometimes occurs during transplant production is that the plants become too large prior to planting in the field. You can reduce the height of your seedlings by reducing the difference between the day and night temperatures. By keeping the temperature fairly constant, the internodes of the seedlings will not develop fully and your seedlings will stay smaller. A warm greenhouse (day and night) will result in seedlings that are short but have more leaves than a cool (also day and night) greenhouse. High temperatures during the early morning hours (just after sunrise) will also result in greater seedling height. You can also reduce plant height by keeping the temperature cooler during this time.

Another important factor in greenhouse environment control is maintaining the proper humidity levels. High relative humidity in the greenhouse, especially going into the evening hours, can be an invitation to a disease problem. As the temperature falls, the water vapor could condense on the roof of the greenhouse and then drip on the plants through the night. Cool temperatures and wet plants are a major contributing factor in the development of plant diseases. Be sure to vent your production greenhouses, even on cool days, to prevent this buildup of humidity going into the evening. The slight increase in heating costs will be low when you consider the potential cost of losing all or a portion of your plants to disease.

Preventing the start of a disease in your vegetable transplants is important but the way you respond to the appearance of any diseases is also critical. Plants showing any possible disease symptoms should immediately be isolated, if possible, to determine if a disease is actually present. If a disease is identified, then action can be taken on those specific plants and the rest of your transplants were not unnecessarily exposed to the disease while you determined the cause of the problem. The mixing of plants from different production areas should also be avoided to reduce the spread of disease. A rapid response on your part is most important in preventing the further spread of disease in your transplant operation.

Ultimately, management of your greenhouse to promote the development of strong, healthy vegetable transplants will help reduce the possibility of a disease outbreak. Healthy transplants will also establish in the field faster and most likely result in greater yields throughout the growing season. Take some time to review your vegetable transplant production methods to see if there are any ways to improve. It will surely be time well spent.

Christopher Reeve And Family To Receive Human Spirit Award

MALVERN (Chester Co.) — Thorncroft Equestrian Center, one of the country's oldest and largest therapeutic riding centers, has selected Christopher Reeve, his wife Dana, and son Will as the group winners of The 1997 Thorncroft Human Spirit Award.

Nominated by Thorncroft's riders and chosen by a blue ribbon selection board, The Human Spirit Award is Thorncroft's highest honor. It is presented to individuals or support families who, by their outstanding achievements and great strides, have inspired people with a diversity of abilities to rise above human conditions to learn and grow together.

"The Reeve family's heroic battle to rebuild their lives in the face of diversity has provided an inspiring lesson about the healing power of love," said Saunders Dixon, Thorncroft's founder and director. "We see similar results played out in the daily lives of our own riders and their families."

As group winners, Reeve and his family will receive specially-commissioned medallions as the guests of honor at Thorncroft's Annual Victory Gallop, April 5, at the Park Hyatt Philadelphia at the Bellevue. The medals will be presented personally by members of Thorncroft's Family of the Year.

This year, Thorncroft has recognized the family of Bruce and Karen Smith as the 1997 "Family Of The Year." With three children of their own, the Smiths have served as foster parents for up to 10 children, many who ride at Thorncroft. The Smiths were chosen for their dedication to children with special needs — sharing their own strength and family values with those around them. The Smith family includes Colin Smith, 21, Adam Smith, 18, and Corinne Smith, 16. The Smiths are currently caring for three foster children — Taiana, 7, Brittany, 5, and a newborn baby girl who came to them at Christmas.

Set in the pasture land of Chester County, Thorncroft brings adults and children with a variety of abilities together to ride, talk and share in an accepting environment where they can learn and grow together. Of the program's 350 riders, approximately half come to Thorncroft with special needs. More than 150 are disabled from disease, a traumatic accident, Down's Syndrome or mental disability. Many are confined to wheelchairs, walkers, or emotional types of isolation. Riding unlocks those confines.

More than 200 men, women, and teen-agers volunteer to assist Thorncroft's staff of skilled equestrians. Thorncroft offers riding lessons as a unique form of therapy. Atop horses, students are distracted from typical therapy sessions, as they walk in the woods or across an open field on four powerful legs.

Riders come to Thorncroft from family homes, regional schools, support programs and health care facilities. Roughly 20 percent of the disabled riders are on full or partial scholarship. The difference is made up through donations. There is a two-year waiting list for Thorncroft's therapeutic program. Though the full price for a lesson is $30 or $120 per month, no one is ever turned away for lack of funds.

Enviroscape Loan Program Available

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Educators, Educators, Boy Scout, Girl Scout, and 4-H Leaders — do you have soils, water quality, or pollution in your curriculum? Are these topics required for a badge or study unit?

If so, the Lancaster County Conservation District has a deal for you. As a free loan and service, educators, scout and 4-H leaders can borrow the enviroScape model for use in the classroom.

The enviroScape is a miniature plastic watershed with a housing development, farm, industry, sewage treatment plant, golf course, roads, and waterways which drain into a river or bay. It can be used to demonstrate point and non-point source pollution in a fun and visual way.

Cocoa powder sprinkled on the brown terrain around the housing development and farm represents soil. Colored powdered drink sprinkled on the green terrain of the lawns, and golf course represents pesticides and fertilizers. Vegetable oil on the roads represents gas and oils. You simply supply a rainstorm with a spray bottle and it's easy to see the run-off and resulting pollution. Conclude the activity with a discussion and demonstration on ways to manage, minimize, or eliminate the run-off and pollution.

The Lancaster County Conservation District enviroScape Loan Program is made possible with a minigrant from the Chesapeake Bay Education Office Nonpoint Source Pollution Prevention Program. The lightweight model, complete with supplies, lesson plan, and sturdy plastic carrying case, will be delivered in person to your school or site, and is available for a two-week loan basis.

If you would like to reserve the enviroScape, call Chotty Sprenkle, environmental education coordinator, (717) 299-5361.

Department Issues Fraud Alert

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — As the spring planting season approaches, consumers should be aware of misleading and exaggerated advertising claims about lawn seed, according to Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius.

"Certain advertisements for mail order lawn seed promise sensational results and charge expensive prices," Brosius said. "The truth is, many of these products are common, cool season grasses which can be purchased at local stores for a fraction of the cost. Remember, if it appears too good to be true, it probably is."

Brosius urged consumers to stay alert for products which may not live up to the advertisement's claims. He suggests consumers should check with a reputable local dealer before purchasing grass seed to be sure you are getting the most appropriate seed for your lawn. There are many improved varieties on the market, and some less expensive seeds may provide the same results as those being sold at higher prices.

The Agriculture Department is required to uphold the provisions of the Pennsylvania Seed Act regarding advertising claims of companies which do business within the Commonwealth.

NOFA-N.J. Hires Certification Administrator

PENNINGTON, N.J. — The Northeastern Organic Farming Association - New Jersey chapter (NOFA-NJ) announced the newest addition to their program. Michele Bassler has joined the staff as certification administrator. Bassler has a master's degree in entomology from the University of Delaware, experience in integrated pest management through the Rutgers Cooperative Extension Fruit IPM program, and extensive experience in quality control for a large agribusiness firm.

She is available full time to answer calls and help growers with the certification process.

"This is a big step forward in the professionalization of our service to growers," said Emily Brown Rosen, technical director, who will continue to be available for grower questions and support. "The number of NOFA-NJ certified farms has tripled since 1994, and having Michele on board will enable us to do more for our growers."

NOFA-NJ certified 33 farms in New Jersey and 21 farms in Pennsylvania in 1996.

NOFA-NJ is now accepting applications for the 1997 Organic Certification program. Application packages are available at a cost of $10 for new applicants (deductible from the certification fee) and includes the 1997 NOFA-NJ Organic Certification Standards. Growers should send $10 to NOFA-NJ, 33 Titus Mill Road, Pennington, NJ 08534. The deadline for completed applications is Friday, March 7. The approval process takes six to nine months to complete and the certification term runs for one year from the date of approval.

1997 Dairy Of Distinction Applications Sought

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Do you take pride in maintaining your dairy farm? Does your dairy farm project an attractive, wholesome image to consumers? If so, the Dairy of Distinction Program of New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania will consider your farm for the program's annual recognition awards.

The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program was first started in 1983 to recognize the hard work and dedication of the farmers who maintained attractive farms. The purpose of the program is to instill a greater sense of confidence in the wholesomeness of dairy products, and increase their sales.

Farms that apply are judged on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds, and surroundings, since this is what our dairy product consumers observe as they drive by. The cleanliness of the barnyard, feed areas, and manure management are other aspects of the farm operation taken into consideration. Roadside judging is conducted during the month of May. Former winners of past years are also rejudged to ensure they continue to meet standards of excellence.

To qualify for consideration, you must be actively dairy farming and shipping milk. Applications are available for New York and Pennsylvania from Stephanie Meyers, American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc., 219 South West Street, Suite 100, Syracuse, NY 13202-1205, (315) 472-9143; or New Jersey from August Knispel, 641 Sidney Road, Pittstown, NJ 08867, (908) 735-4989. All applications must be completed and returned by April 15, 1997. You may also contact your county agent for more information.

Young Farmers Help FFA

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — Kutztown FFA officers recently received a check from the Kutztown Young Farmer Chapter.

The check was used to pay for converting a garage to a building able to house animals. These animals are part of the students' school projects.

The check was presented at a school board meeting. Bill Zollers, president of Kutztown Young Farmers, presented the check to the FFA officers and he also thanked the school board for their support of the Kutztown Young Farmers Chapter and Vo Ag program over the past years.

Recently the Kutztown Young Farmers viewed a video of the Ukraine taken and narrated by James Patches.

Eight years ago a Ukraine family moved to Reistville. Four years later more family members moved to this settlement near Schaefferstown.

Word from these Ukraine families spread to Heidelberg Church of the Brethren of the needs of family members still living in the Ukraine. With the assistance of Christian Aide, Heidelberg Church of the Brethren sent a 40-foot container of used clothing, food, blankets, medical supplies, and church supplies in August 1996 to the Ukraine.

At the end of September 1996, James and Jean Patches (Heidelberg Church members) and 12 other people flew to Khiev and helped to distribute the goods to the areas the Ukraine families originated from.

James and Jean Patches, members of Heidelberg Church of the Brethren, presented a video to the Kutztown Young Farmers Chapter.

CAB Program Promotes Three Staff Members

WOOSTER, Ohio — Three executive promotions have been announced for the Certified Angus Beef (CAB) Program, the nation's largest specification-based branded beef program.

Tracey Erickson has been named assistant executive director. Rebecca Thomas is the new director of the CAB Program's international division, replacing Erickson, and Colby Horn is director of the CAB Program packing division. All three will work out of the Wooster, Ohio, headquarters.

Tracey Erickson was named an assistant executive director of the CAB Program. She joins the administrative division in overseeing daily Program operations. "I am excited about the opportunity to interact with all Program staff and coordinate divisional efforts," she said.

Erickson will also be responsible for coordinating the Program's consumer-focused marketing efforts through its staff-based consumer task force. The task force was designed to build consumer brand awareness in Certified Angus Beef™ product. "Establishing a consumer focus is a very important direction for the program. We are starting a process that will continue in 1997 and beyond," Erickson said.

"After four years as the international division director, this new position certainly brings exciting challenges and opportunities," she said. Since 1992, Erickson has been instrumental in developing sound licensing policies and procedures for the international division. Promotional materials and resources were also developed in a variety of foreign languages.

During her tenure, international sales increased by 325 percent to 34 million pounds in fiscal 1996. Today, Certified Angus Beef product is distributed to consumers in more than 30 international destinations.

Prior to joining the Program, Tracey earned her bachelor's degree in animal science and master's degree in the Agricultural Beef Industry Leadership Program at Colorado State University.

Rebecca Thomas has been promoted to director of the CAB Program's international division. Formerly assistant director of this division, Thomas is responsible for overseeing program activities outside of the 50 states.

Thomas said, "Our main goal in 1997 is to increase consumer awareness around the globe." She also works with the marketing division to develop promotional and educational materials and plan events for the international division.

Rebecca received her bachelor's degree from Colorado State University in animal science with an industry concentration. Her experience includes serving as the assistant coordinator for the 1996 International Center at the National Western Stock Show.

She and her husband, Robb, will relocated to Wooster, Ohio, in February 1997. "We are very excited to be coming to a new part of the country. I'm looking forward to working in the program's executive office and taking advantage of the exchange of information between all staff members," Thomas said.

Colby Horn was promoted to director of the CAB Program packing division. "I'm looking forward to working more with the production segments of the beef industry, as well as with each division of the CAB Program," Horn said.

As director, Horn coordinates the packing division from postfeedlot through fabricationa. His reponsibilities include addressing trademark issues, excess production and shortages concerning Certified Angus Beef product. He will also develop new plant startups and communicate with the USDA, and licensed program packers and fabricators.

He joined the program as an assistant director of the retail division in January 1996. Horn said, "It's been a beneficial year in retail. I've learned a lot being face-to-face with consumers and retailers, dealing with issues and solving problems."

Horn is a graduate of Oklahoma State University with a bachelor's degree in animal science/business. His production experience comes from being a herd consultant and owning a herd of purebred Angus cows. In addition, Horn gained retail experience as a meat cutter at Wal-Mart Supercenter and through various fabrication experiences.

He said, "I think it is important to understand each segment of the beef industry in order to effectively communicate problems, and ultimately help solve them."

Horn and his wife, Amy, are living in Wooster with their daughter, Karlye.

Established in 1978 as a division of the American Angus Association, the CAB program's goal is to increase demand for Angus cattle by providing consumers with a flavorful, high quality beef product. The CAB program works with producers, packers, fabricators and processor/manufacturers to address customer demands in the international, food service, and retail marketplace.

Animal Production Food Safety Conference Set

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. — The Livestock Conservation Institute (LCI) announced it will host a Conference on Animal Production Food Safety, April 1-3 in Columbus, Ohio.

On July 25, 1996, a major reform of USDA food safety regulations known as "Pathogen Reduction and Hazard Analysis Critical Control Points (HACCP)" set new requirements for meat and poultry slaughtering and processing plants. The first stage of the rule's implementation went into effect recently and its impact on food animal production remains to be seen.

Keynote presentations, seminars, and panels will include the following: public health perspective, retail/food service perspectives, balancing perceptions with science in addressing safe food policy, realistic expectations and likely ramifications of HACCP on food animal production, focus on current quality driven initiatives, animal identification in a production food safety environment, understanding consumer expectations and trends, and what is expected to compete in a global market?

"An outstanding lineup of prominent industry leaders, researchers, and government officials will speak at the conference," said Dr. Richard Breitmeyer, director of animal industry for the California Department of Food and Agriculture. "We expect that with the knowledge assembled at the conference, we will be able to address a number of key issues specific to HACCP's likely impact on food animal production."

Breitmeyer is the chairman of LCI's Food Safety Assurance Committee and chairs the conference's program committee, made up of a cross section of leaders and officials involved throughout animal agriculture.

Among other organizations assisting LCI in planning the conference are American Farm Bureau Federation, American Society of Animal Science, American Veterinary Medical Association, United States Animal Health Association, and USDA's Food Safety & Inspection Service.

The conference will be held in conjunction with LCI's 81st annual meeting. To obtain program and registration information, contact LCI at (502) 782-9798.

Sheep & Wool Festival Announces Events

GLENWOOD, Md. — Budd Martin will evaluate fine and medium wool breeds while Jim Marshall will pick the longwool prizewinners Saturday and Sunday, May 3-4 for the Maryland Sheep & Wool Festival at the Howard County Fairgrounds in West Friendship.

This year the festival is pleased to welcome the National Karakul, National Border Leicester, and Natural Colored Border Leicester shows to the lineup. Other classes include Columbia, Corriedale, Lincoln, Rambouillet, Romney, Black Lincoln, Black Romney, white wool division, and natural colored division.

Breeders from across the U.S. and Canada will bring nearly 1,000 animals to compete. Deadline for entries is March 15. Questions regarding the sheep show only should be directed to Natalie Glunz at (717) 838-6863.

"Loom Land," a special exhibit presented by five leading loom manufacturers, will give visitors the chance to understand and try out different types of weaving equipment. Mountain Loom Co., Good Wood Co., Schacht Spindle Co., Kessenich Looms, and Norsk Fjord will have looms warped and ready for people to try out in "Loom Land."

In addition to providing demonstrations and advice, representatives of these firms will be leading seminars throughout the weekend, with topics spanning the workings of a loom, matching equipment to projects, eight-harness table looms, tapestry and weft-faced weaving. Several classes will be geared to children and teenagers included "Weaving on a Paper Plate Loom." These and other weekend crafts sessions are free of charge or require only a nominal fee.

Prior to the official opening of the festival, three in-depth fibercraft workshops led by nationally renowned artisans will be held. On Thursday, May 1 and Friday, May 2, Deb Menz will cover dying and blending on a drum carder and spinning. Participants will be dying roving, then splitting and recombining the fiber to make both vivid solids and variegated colored yarn.

Margaret Fisher will teach "sock hitting" in another Thursday class, explaining how to design, turn the heel, and use the Kirchner method of weaving off for a seamless toe. Previous experience casting on, knitting, and purling is assumed. On Friday and Saturday, Nancy Harvey will present "Tapestry Weaving." This class for beginners will cover both design and technique. These popular workshops carry a fee and registration is limited. Sign-ups will be taken by phone at (410) 531-3647 on a first-come, first-served basis beginning at 8 a.m. on April 21.

The fairgrounds are open to the public from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday and from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday (crafts buildings close at 6 p.m. Saturday and 5 p.m. Sunday). Attendees may not bring dogs on the fairgrounds. General questions should be directed to Leslie Bauer at the Festival office, P.O. Box 99, Glenwood, MD 21738, (410) 531-3647.

Hort Show A Changed Event

GENEVA, N.Y. — The 1997 New York State Horticultural Society Meeting and Trade Show was held at the Thruway Marriott in Rochester, N.Y. on Jan. 8-9.

It was a dramatic departure from the tractor tire-kicking shows of the past which were formerly held at The Dome amphitheater. The meeting emphasized educational programs on tree fruits and grapes, grower interaction, and a lively trade show of smaller exhibitors.

"We had over 600 participants and 60 exhibitors," said Hort Society executive director Dan Donahue. "The facilities were superior and it was great to have the Western New York Tree Fruit School as part of the show."

Donahue believes the primary issue facing the fruit industry in New York is economic development and profitability. "Our rate of investment return as an average is way too low. The fruit industry needs to pay more attention to the income side, helping growers focus on ways to attain good prices, and produce value-added products that will bring in more income," he said.

Steve Hoying of the Lake Ontario Fruit Team, who helped organize the Tree Fruit School, was pleased with the facilities and the attendance. Bob Brown, director of the New York Apple Association, also liked the move. "People who want to learn something are here. The topics are excellent."

In tree fruit, sessions were standing room only. Topics presented by researchers from the Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva, N.Y. and the Hudson Valley Lab in Highland, N.Y., included understanding and using the clones of the M.9 rootstock (Terence Robinson), future management of oblique-banded leaf roller (Harvey Reissig), the progress toward control of yeast-like fungi (Tom Burr), the effects of foliar feeding insects on apple production systems using size-controlled rootstocks (Dick Straub), 1996 results with AVG (Ed Stover), apple scab (Wayne Wilcox), fireblight (Jay Norelli), how to time fungicides to control summer diseases (Dave Rosenberger), bloom and petalfall thinning (Ed Stover and Terence Robinson), opportunities for developing value-added food products at the NYS Food Venture Center (Judy Anderson and Mark McLellan), and mite management strategies (Art Agnello).

Other Cornell University presenters included Robert Milligan and Tom Maloney from the department of Agricultural Resources and Management on employee issues, and Ian Merwin on cover cropping. A cooperative extension presentation on invisible fencing was provided by Regina Rieckenberg and Paul Curtis, and Debbie Breth moderated an industry panel on tips and techniques for airblast sprayer setup.

Out-of-state presenters included Larry Hull, of Penn State, David Ferree of Ohio State, and Lynn Long of Oregon State.

An Ag Labor Issues breakfast was held on Jan. 9 and a NYS Labor Housing Loan program workshop was held Jan. 8. Pesticide recertification credit was given for the meeting.

Sixty exhibitors attended the show. They represented nurseries, irrigation, chemical, refrigeration, lumber, packing, picking, tractor, insurance, sprayers, and fencing companies. The Experiment Station, the NYS Apple Association, NYS Ag and Markets, and several grower/fruit publications rounded out the exhibitors represented that serve the fruit industry.

At the NYS Horticultural Society Reception on Wednesday night in the Henrietta Ballroom, James P. Tette, Statewide IPM Program Director presented "1997 Excellence in Integrated Pest Management" awards to Dawn and Bob Betts, who farm 100 acres of grapes in western New York, and apple grower Darrel Oakes.

Jennifer Halsey, a Cornell University senior, was awarded the annual $1,000 Abbott Lab scholarship.
